By GEORGE CONSIDINE.
Special Cable Dispatch to Boston American.

LONDON, July 7.—After eighteen years of waiting London tonight is going to have a genuine boxing contest with the championship of the world in the balance—and London seems less interested than it was a week ago this time on the night before the farcical performance by "Bombardier" Wells and Colin Bell.

Ritchie is confident of winning and says he will lower the colors of his English rival via the knockout rout.

In all my experience I never saw less newspaper publicity and less general anticipation on the part of the public—where the champion of the world in any division was about to go twenty rounds to defend his title.

The amazing truth is the British public actually prefers the impossible (but handsome) Bombardier to Freddie Welsh than whom there is probably no cleverer lightweight in the history of the game.

WELSH RULING FAVORITE.

For one reason or another, Welsh is not popular with Londoners. As for Ritchie, he is unknown.

"Yes, I suppose he must be the champion of the world," one London

Sinclair Fined for Mourners' Patrol

NEW YORK, July 7.—Judge Crain today denied the appeal of Upton Sinclair and four women who were convicted of disorderly conduct while they maintained a "patrol of mourners" in front of the Standard Oil Building. Each was fined $3 and Sinclair appealed. Judge Crain said: "No citizen has the right to rebuke another by exposing him to public abuse and insult."

U. S. Commissioner Shields Is Dead

NEW YORK, July 7.—United States Commissioner John A. Shields died today after a long illness. He was in his seventy-fifth year, having been born in Brooklyn in 1838. Commissioner Shields probably sent more men to prison than any other official of the government. He had served in the Federal courts since 1855.

Brookline Man Killed on Freight

Joseph N. Quinlan of No. 24 Winthrop place, Brookline, was riding on top of a fast freight from Worcester to Boston last night and failed to duck for a low bridge. He died of a fractured skull and multiple injuries, and was taken to the Framingham morgue.

Mrs. Keenan Decides She Will Not Return

Mrs. James H. Keenan, of No. 216 Grant avenue, Medford, who was reported missing from home since Friday, telephoned once that she was coming back, but now sends another message stating that she has made up her mind not to.

Chief George H. Hill of Worcester today notified the Psychopathic Hospital that the "mystery girl" now be Mary A. Stanley of No. 516 West Boylston street, Worcester, who left there two weeks ago and who answers the girl's description.

The "Mystery Girl" found dazed and alone in the North Station last Saturday, and who is unable to remember her name or her home, was put through an exhaustive series of tests or mild "third degree" at the Psychopathic Hospital today.

She was sent there from the Relief Station for observation for a period of thirty days. The tests today consisted of a rigid cross-examination by a group of doctors, and of a searching physical examination. There were no physical tests—pinsticking, rapping the knee, cold showers and such.

Up till this afternoon the girl had baffled the doctors at the hospital. They thought there was a remote possibility she was shamming, but are by no means satisfied they know just what is the matter with her.

DOCTORS IN DOUBT.

Dr. Harry R. Adler said today: "This case has its unusual features. The girl is mild-mannered, well-spoken, well-appearing. Although we are inclined in a very small degree to believe she is shamming, we will not be positive now. But we will shortly find out.

"We are putting her through tests, a sort of mild third degree. No tapping of the knee, or any physical test, but a physical examination, and some questioning. We test her imagination and her memory—the former by showing her pictures and asking her to describe them; the latter by repeating questions at intervals and comparing her answers each time.

"She slept well, eats hearty meals, talks freely with the nurses and seems perfectly contented. We are surprised the widespread publicity in the case has not resulted in her identification."

STILL A STRANGER.

Hundreds have attempted to identify the Mystery Girl.

She is between nineteen and twenty-one years old, weighs about 110 pounds, is five feet two inches tall, has wavy chestnut hair, large blue eyes and cheeks of high color.

She wore good clothes. She carried a gold locket with the initials "E. T. D." This contained the picture of a little girl.

TESTS FOR MAID OF MYSTERY

MALDEN WIFE SUES WOMAN

Mrs. Georgia E. Eldridge of No. 62 Linwood street, Malden, today filed a $10,000 alienation suit against Mrs. Emilie Bliss Meek, charging that Mrs. Meek won away the love of her husband, Horace W. Eldridge, a well-to-do Malden business man, with a Summer home on the Cape.

The suit created a tremendous amount of gossip in Malden and Melrose, and already sensational testimony is promised if or when it is brought to trial. It is said a visit of a neighbor to the Eldridge home with a shotgun will figure in the case.

Mrs. Meek was engaged some time ago as a sewing machine demonstrator by Mr. Eldridge, and for a time boarded at the Eldridge home. His place of business is at No. 464 Main street, Malden, and Mrs. Meek now lives at the same address and is called in the directory a real estate operator.

The Eldridges have two grown sons, Horace, Jr., and Clarence. Mr. Eldridge is a prominent Melrose lodgeman and member of the Knights of Pythias.

Two Held in $1,500 for Double Break

Alexander M. Smith was held in $1,500 by Judge Parmenter today, charged with breaking and entering. Both men were accused of entering the apartments of Louis Evans on Exeter street and of Charles Mortimer on Boylston place.

Warburg Out of the Reserve Board

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Paul M. Warburg of New York practically has been eliminated as a member of the Federal Reserve Board. President Wilson has been advised unofficially that he will refuse to accept the place rather than submit to any examination by the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency. The White House has not heard from him directly, however, but expects to.

Storstad Sold for $175,000 at Auction

MONTREAL, July 7.—The Storstad, the collier which sank the Empress of Ireland on May 29 last at Father Point, was sold at auction here today for $175,000. The Prudential Trust Company bought the vessel for foreign agents, believed to be the original owners of this ship. She cost $260,000 two years ago.

STRIKING PHOTOGRAPH OF DR. AND MRS. CARMAN.

"What a mistake I made in installing a dictagraph," says Mrs. Carman.

WIFE OF DOCTOR TELLS OF SPYING

FREEPORT, N. Y., July 7.—Mrs. Edwin Carman, wife of Dr. Carman, in whose office Mrs. Louise Bailey was mysteriously shot to death, today tells her own story of the tragedy, protesting her innocence and bewailing her jealousy of her husband that led her to install a dictagraph in his office. The dictagraph she blames for the suspicion which she feels rests upon her.

By VIOLA RODGERS.

"A terrible coincidence—that is the key to my predicament. I made the dire mistake of placing a distaphone in my husband's office. A woman was shot to death in his office. I know that I am suspected."

Keen-minded, self-composed, but with the story of a week's sleepless suffering, the human side of the far-shadowing Freeport mystery told me the appealing story of her love, her life, her tragedy.

The woman who has been described as "cold and repellant" I found to be sensitively feminine, at times as piteous in her self-reproach as a child. She appears cold because of her efforts at repression.

"This would crush me utterly—you can easily understand," she said. "But I am keeping up because of my mother, who has collapsed. If an indictment were to follow the hearing that is now going on, the State of New York will be responsible for the death of my mother. She will not survive the blow. For I am innocent and she knows it to be so.

CALLS IT DREADFUL MISTAKE.

"It all hangs on the fact that I had secretly installed a dictaphone. What a mistake I made! What a time I took for my experiment to confirm or allay the suspicions about my husband which had tortured me

Dedham Girl Sues for Broken Troth

Anne Sheridan of Dedham filed a suit for breach of promise for $2,000 against Bartholomew Fitzgerald of Walpole today in the Superior Court of Dedham. The plaintiff alleges that Fitzgerald promised to marry her and that when she wanted to talk the matter over with him he refused to meet her.

PENA'S TROOPS REBEL; FUNSTON FEARS ATTACK

WASHINGTON, July 7.—A large force of the troops under General Pena, outside of Vera Cruz, Mexico, have mutinied, and an attack upon the American outposts is expected tonight, General Funston wired the War Department today. Funston reported that General Pena notified him of this fact and that Funston replied that he would not consider such an attack a hostile act against the United States.

VERA CRUZ, July 7.—Senor Octavio Campero, chief agent of the Constitutionalists here, sent a dispatch to General Carranza early today stating that the Federal outposts in the neighborhood of Vera Cruz had revolted and decided to cast their lot with the revolution.

Querido Moheno, former Minister of Commerce and Industry, was forced by President Huerta to resign and flee to Puerto Mexico for his life, according to his wife, who expressed fear today that Moheno might have been captured. Senora Moheno and her children fled from the capital with the ex-cabinet member as far as Cordoba, but there the party separated, the wife and children coming here and Moheno going to Vera Cruz, Mexico. It is not known whether Moheno reached his destination.

"If my husband has been arrested he undoubtedly will be executed," said Senor Moheno. "General Huerta had threatened to shoot him."

Mrs. Angle Is Near Collapse

STAMFORD, Ct., July 7.—Mrs. Helen M. Angle, who is held pending the finding of the Coroner on the death of Waldo B. Ballou, was on the verge of a collapse in her cell today. She suffered repeated hysterical attacks, throwing herself violently on her knees beside her cot and bursting into tears.

"Before God I am innocent," she cried incessantly. "That is all that is helping me."

"I believe I am going to die soon," she said. "I feel it, but I swear to you before God that I am innocent."

On hearing that she might be transferred from the local lock-up to the county jail at Bridgeport, Mrs. Angle, with her father, Leonard Mondel, appealed to Chief of Police Brennan to be allowed to remain here.

She promised if her request was granted to give as little trouble as possible, and to see practically no callers except her father and her counsel.

Chinese Brigand at Gate of Sianfu

SHANGHAI, July 7.—"White Wolf," the notorious Chinese brigand, with a horde of 10,000 well-armed outlaws, have encamped upon the outskirts of the city of Sianfu and the inhabitants are fleeing in panic. Fears prevail that the brigands will seize and pillage the city. Sianfu lies upon a railway in Shensi Province. It has a population of 1,000,000. For 2,000 years it was the capital of Eastern China.

Sew in Somerville for Salem Sufferers

Rev. George L. Parker, pastor of the Broadway Congregational Church, Somerville, and former pastor of the Cronkite Street Congregational Church, Salem, has received fifteen rolls of dress goods from a Somerville tailor with which to make dresses for four of his former parishioners who were burned out in the Salem fire. Young women of the parish are making the dresses at a sewing bee.

Papineau Is Sued by Lawyer Darling

For legal services rendered Papineau at that time Darling is bringing this suit.

RUSH THROUGH TWO BILLS FOR SALEM RELIEF

The Senate today rushed through two bills for relief at Salem and sent them to the House. One appropriates $100,000 for the relief of the poor and the preservation of the health of the people of Salem; the other appropriates $25,000 for reimbursing Salem for abated taxes.

An echo of the fire was the announcement of the South Danvers Mutual Fire Insurance Company, that the company lost $18,000 in the fire, and that the policies will be turned over to another company and that this company will go out of business.

In spite of the terrific rain and wind of the night, refugees at Salem were comfortable today. The tents were not blown down or damaged by the storm. The Second Corps Cadets are now on guard duty. The relief work is running like clockwork, and there is no more labor and building materials were being moved into the burned district for temporary construction. The "bread line" has decreased till rations are being served only 2,500 instead of twice that number.

The Apollo Theatre at No. 1048 Washington street, will give its entire receipts afternoon and evening today to the Relief Fund.

Guard Rockefeller Against Anarchists

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., July 7.—The large force of armed guards that has ever guarded the Rockefeller estate at Pocantico Hills was on duty today. No person was permitted to approach the oil magnate's home without some legitimate reason. The guards are detectives who have been working in Anarchist and I. W. W. circles in New York to learn the identity of the most active "Reds" and be able to recognize them if they attempt to invade the Rockefeller estate.

Terrorist Plot on Crowned Heads

Judge Wentworth today in the Somerville Police Court issued an order of notice to Mayor Cliff and the Somerville Board of Alderman that he will review in the court in that city on July 25, the petition of former Police Captain Robert E. Perry for reinstatement on the grounds that he was not "physically incapacitated" when retired by them on half pay. The notice further states that Mayor Cliff and Aldermen may appear and be heard as to whether their action in removing Perry was lawful.

Melrose Mayor Fights Pony Express

The pony express flight has reached an acute stage in Melrose. The Supreme Court has ruled that every city must grant at least one license. Melrose voted overwhelmingly not to grant express licenses. EISMAN READY TO WAGE BITTER FIGHT IN COURT

Louis Eisman, the chauffeur, who was captured in Portland with Fern Hallian, daughter of a well to do Hull and Arlington man, after he had eloped with her, and for three days captive, will fight to the limit any attempt to prosecute him, it became known today. He is free on $1,000 bail, furnished by Morris G. Levine and Solomon Eisman, and it was learned today that he is well supplied with money.

Mrs. Hallian, the girl's mother, on the other hand, said:

"Talk of a settlement is all a mistake. There will be no settlement.

"Fern and Mr. Eisman have not spoken to each other since they left Portland in custody. Fern cares no more for him. She will see no one this week, but next Monday when Mr. Eisman's case comes up in court, it will be shown that all talk that she still loves him is wrong."

The fact that Eisman's bail was increased and the strong feeling shown by Mr. and Mrs. Hallian led to the belief that more serious charges may be preferred against Eisman.

Michael J. Sughrue, Mr. Hallian's attorney, would not discuss this.

Fern Hallian remained close indoors at her home in Hull today and saw no one. Mrs. Hallian said she would see no one till next Monday, when the case comes up in court.

Waltham Wife Seeks Lost Husband

Mrs. Jennie Leonard of No. 89 Willow street, Waltham, has appealed to the AMERICAN to help her locate her husband, John Leonard, a charcoal team driver who has been mysteriously absent since Friday last. She describes her husband as six feet tall, weighing 125 pounds, black hair, smooth face, dimpled chin. He wore a light Norfolk suit, high black button shoes, lavender socks and a sailor straw hat.

Plea for Higher Pay for Teachers

ST. PAUL, July 7.—A plea for increased wages for teachers was made by Charles William Dabney, president of the University of Cincinnati, before the National Educational Association today. "The rich man who employs a $25,000 lawyer, or a $10,000 physician, regards a $1,500 college professor as good enough to train his son," declared Professor Dabney. "The higher cost of living bears more heavily on college professors than on other men. The effective salary of the professor is only half what it was twenty years ago," W. I. Hamilton of Boston advocated pensions for teachers.

Expect Droppers to Get Greek Mission

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The resignation of George Fred Williams as Minister to Greece and Montenegro was handed to President Wilson at the Cabinet meeting today by Secretary of State Bryan. The White House now regards the incident as closed. Professor Garrett Droppers of Williams' College, Mass., who originally was selected by President Wilson to be Minister of Greece, is expected to be named for Williams' post. Droppers name was laid aside because of Secretary Bryan's desire to have Williams appointed.

MAY FORBID PUBLIC BURIAL OF BOMB DEAD

NEW YORK, July 7.—Fearing that a public funeral for the anarchists killed by the explosion of a bomb last Saturday will afford opportunity for a repetition of the Haymarket riot of 1886, city officials conferred today in an effort to decide upon the best means of preventing the demonstration. Mayor Mitchel called Police Commissioner Woods into conference early in the day to discuss the laws that might be invoked.

Two plans were mooted upon as feasible, one was to order the burial of the bodies before daylight, the date set for the demonstration; the other to refuse a permit for a gathering at Union square. Under the law the health department has the authority to force the burial of all bodies within ninety-six hours after death. The time limit in the case of the anarchists will expire tomorrow morning.

Alderman Charles Delaney, who represents the district in which the explosion occurred, announced that he would introduce a measure to forbid funeral orations over the bodies.

BLAMES TANGO IN HIS HOME FOR NON-SUPPORT

Because Emma Duran tangoed so much in household duties, tangoed while cooking the food, while making the beds, while combing her hair when going downstairs, her father, George A. Duran, testified today in the South Boston court before Associate Justice Logan that he lost courage in supporting his family.

"Why, your honor," the father said, "the first thing I hear in the morning is that tango. My daughter does not give me my breakfast except with the tango step. She will tango to the kitchen stove and then back again with the beans balanced in her hand with the tango movement. I am just tango crazy, judge."

Duran was charged with nonsupport of his wife, who accused him of not giving her more than $28 for the support of the family since last Christmas. This Duran denied, but was given two months in the House of Correction for nonsupport of his wife, while the charge of intoxication was placed on file.

Duran in leaving court asked the judge if he knew what would cure the tango fever, but was immediately silenced by the clerk of court.

WALSH URGES PASSAGE OF TAX LEGISLATION

Governor Walsh today sent to the Legislature a special message urging the passage of a bill which would assess the corporations regulated by the Public Service Commission to pay the expenses of the commission.

"There is an opportunity," the message begins, "before the Legislature of 1914 adjourns, to transfer the state tax to the extent of at least $200,000 yearly by changing the law of last year, placing the expense of the Public Service Commission on the State.

He recites the recognized policy in dealing with all corporations heretofore—the policy of assessing them the cost of supervision, and concluded:

"The action of last year's Legislature in departing from this sound public policy means an addition of $200,000 to this year's State tax and an equal or larger amount yearly for future years. This amount can and should be saved to the taxpayers of the Commonwealth.

"I am again urging this recommendation made in my inaugural because I am convinced that the people of the State, if opportunity were given to them, would demand the enactment of legislation to accomplish this reduction in their tax burden."

MRS. EARL F. THOMPSON, who was formerly Ethel Woodward of Rockland, and whose secret marriage just before she sailed for Europe has just become known.

Episcopal Rector Becomes Catholic

NEW YORK, July 7.—After many years' service in important Episcopal parishes, the Rev. Dr. John A. R. Pitcher, with his wife, has been baptized into the Roman Catholic Church.

ELOPEMENT IS OUT AS CLERK FILES RETURN

With the bride 3,000 miles away, the story of a romantic secret marriage has just come to light in Rockland. Miss Ethel F. Woodward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Woodward of No. 84 Howard street, Rockland, is the bride, and she, with her parents, is in Europe. Earl F. Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Thompson of No. 28 Vernon street, is the groom.

The European trip was arranged by Miss Woodward's parents in the hope that separation would dim her affection for young Thompson. But Miss Woodward and young Thompson put their heads together and determined to marry before the trip. Thompson tried for a license in Rockland but was refused, so he and Miss Woodward slipped away to Seabrook, N. H., secured a license and were married there on June 13 by the Rev. John W. Savage.

There was no rumor of the marriage till two or three days ago Mrs. Thompson found a sheet of note paper on which her son, evidently beginning a letter, had written: "My dear wife." She jokingly questioned him, but he denied being married.

But the next day the marriage license was returned, and the fact of the marriage became public. Mrs. Thompson, mother of the young man, commented: "I cannot believe it is true—would never believe it if the evidence were not overpowering. Miss Woodward sailed three weeks ago for Europe. It is true my son and she had been friends for two years, but there was no talk, so far as we knew, of an early marriage. Postcards and letters have come from her, but I thought nothing of that."

Dismiss Suit Against Brokers

The amount was a balance claimed to be due the firm on account of stock transactions in 1906 and 1907. The claim had been assigned to Learnard by Hooly. Hastings had contended that he had been given a release in a settlement he had made.

Why Cadum is Good for Skin Diseases

The important thing in treating many skin diseases is to keep water away from the inflamed parts and make the covering as air tight as possible. This, according to a very distinguished New York physician, tends to kill the germ and set up the healing process quickly. Cadum, the well-known skin remedy, supplies that kind of a covering and keeps out the air. This covering consists of petrolatum and white wax, which Cadum contains, two other ingredients of Cadum are zinc oxide, which dries up the sores, and that comes from the soreas and oil of cade, which is one of the oldest and best known remedies for Eczema. Physicians everywhere employ oil of cade more often, perhaps, than any other one thing in treating Eczema. Cadum costs 10c for a trial box, while the 25c box contains nearly four times as much as the 10c size.

MRS. CARMAN ADMITS JEALOUSY, DENIES ANY SHARE IN CRIME

FEARS DICTAGRAPH CAUSED SUSPICION

for many months and even years," she added with a sigh.

Then the woman plunged straight and candidly into the story of the dictagraph.

Mrs. Carman is still a youthful appearing woman despite the fact that she has been married twenty-two years. Her face is one of refinement and culture. She gives one the impression of a woman of force of character and determination, yet of emotion.

Her hair formerly dark brown has turned a silvery gray.

"At first, there was not a streak which came after the death of our first little girl when she was three years old. She would have been twenty had she lived," Mrs. Carman added. "Since then it has gradually grown more and more grey. If this terrible affair doesn't turn it bronze entirely I'll be surprised," she continued. "I am sure my husband has never faced a greater situation than I am facing today, and yet I am not fear for I believe that God is in his Heaven and all will be right. It must. It has to be so," she added gravely.

There are no nervous gestures with Mrs. Carman. She sat and talked to me just as she would discuss all no personal matter with a friend or acquaintance. She has poise to a remarkable degree without being aggressive or "strong-minded." On the contrary, Mrs. Carman is splendidly feminine. Her eyes are a deep, luminous blue and her pupils are more than usually large, and they look straight at me. Her nose is straight and chiseled with long, sensitive nostrils and flat depression on either side of them. Her mouth is thin and slightly curved at the corners, and is pleasantest in appearance when she is talking animatedly. Otherwise it is too thin for beauty.

In height Mrs. Carman is petite, five feet six inches, and her weight is about 125 pounds. There is experience in her step and in the firmness in her figure suggestive of youth, and her polished manners give the strong impression.

NOT LIKE AN AMAZON.

"They make me look like an Amazon, don't they?" she remarked when the fact was alluded to.

A very simply laid out which shows determination and force is nothing large nor small, yet it immediately attracts one's attention because of its wholesome, forceful look. It is a head which would believe, that does not shirk working womanly hands—the housewifely hand.

All things observed while in a voice that betrayed no hysterical emotion, but which suggested deep concern and a grave realization of her present position, Mrs. Carman told of the dictagraph and its installation in her household.

"I suppose it was a funny way a woman should not have discovered yet I feel I was justified in steeling my mind of suspicions which had been augmented by random gossip and careless comments which came to me on every hand. For years I have heard remarks made first by one then another carrying the impression that I was a 'smartie' to my husband's gay life—an outside life of which I was no part, and of which I knew but little. (I'd like to have Dick's chances to get out at night,' some one of his friends would say to me. 'You're certainly good natured,' a woman would tell me. 'It's well that wives don't know everything,' another would add. Then occasionally I would hear of some direct thing about the friends of the doctors of whom I knew nothing.

"All this time he has had an interesting practice, and it seemed to me that, with all my economy in keeping down household expense and my desire to have his earnings saved for the future, there was very little progress made. He must be spending it on his gay women friends,' the thought came to me.

TELLS OF FALSE SYMPATHY.

"It was a thought born out of the distorted stories which came floating to me in veiled sympathy from women and careless banter of his men friends. I can hardly call it jealousy, for I was not jealous. What it was to me, I had an increasing sense of shame that my womanhood resented. I had never been second in Dr. Carman's life, and I resented the thought that I was the 'pitied wife.' I resented it so much for our little daughter as I did for myself. Six weeks or so ago I read in the papers about how a dictagraph had been installed in a room to get secret evidence. I had thought first of Mayor Gaynor, but I seriously considered it, and I was afraid it would be found out.

"So dictaphone seemed the only one. I went over to New York and I found out what they would cost me all at the debate. The man asked me why I wanted it. I was about to confessed at the suddenness of his question, and at first, in order to stop asking, I told him I wanted to find out whether I wanted one or not. Then I told him it was necessary for me to tell my mother what I had done and she told me I was very foolish, but I did not tell her that I had installed it.

"I could find that my suspicions were without cause I felt that the instrument would be worth thousands to me in the peace of mind and renewed confidence. On the other hand, I felt that if I were mistaken I would be serious Dr. Carman giving that nurse money at which time I noticed so harshly and coldly, then I felt that at least I would definitely know. If I should find to be the case, then I had determined—not upon a divorce—but that on account of our child I would let him go his way and I would go mine, and that he would no longer be able to make my heart bleed with suspicion and jealousy.

Asked if she had found her suspicions verified by the dictaphone, Mrs. Carman shook her head and said, 'No. I am thankful to say it did not; but then the instrument did not work so well as I expected, and I could not trust it.

Then we talked of many things, including the childhood and the romance of her marriage.

"I was born in Brooklyn," said Mrs. Carman, "but my family came here before I was a baby. The old village, as I remember it in my childhood, was one of the prettiest of the Long Island Colonial villages with one street, and we lived down there in a big house with a garden that was most lovely. Ever since I was six years old I took piano lessons and I have always liked music.

TELLS OF COURTSHIP.

"When I was a young woman I went away to make a month's visit, and when I came back—this was in 1888—Dr. Carman, a handsome, dark-haired young man, just graduated from the Long Island Medical College, in Brooklyn, had come from the country and had begun practice in a village six miles away, and runs out his shingle, as they say in those days. He was the rich one of all the girls, and soon I met him and found myself among the young women to whom he was paying attention. Finally one by one they seemed to drop out, and I was the girl he most often asked out and called upon. We were very much taken with each other from the first, and three years after we met we were married.

At that time, as I said, Dr. Carman was very fair. The boys at college always called him 'Peaches and Cream,' for he had a very white skin and pink cheeks in those days. He's different now, you see.

"We both are and we both have grown much thinner and older during the past week of worry and confusion," she added.

DR. CARMAN ENRAGED AT DETECTIVE W. J. BURNS

NEW YORK, July 7—Enraged at the third degree examinations which his wife had been subjected, Dr. Edwin Carman, in whose office at Freeport, L. I., Mrs. Louise Bailey was shot to death last week, declared today that if Mrs. Carman were arrested he would exhaust every resource in his power to fight her battle for her.

"I know that an arrest is impending and that my wife is suspected," declared Dr. Carman. The physician grew so angry while Detective W. J. Burns, who has been brought into the case to assist the Nassau County authorities, was questioning Mrs. Carman that he threatened to throw Burns out of the house.

"Why don't you stop this man?" shouted Carman to George M. Levy, attorney for Mrs. Carman, pointing to Burns. "My wife has already told her story to the sheriff, the coroner and the district attorney."

The detective was imperturbable and continued to shout out his interrogations. Finally he said to Dr. Platt Conklin, mother of Mrs. Carman:

"You can't see her; she's sick," snapped Dr. Carman.

"I must see Mrs. Carman," insisted Burns.

"Insist all you want to but it will do no good," exploded the doctor. "She is in bed and nothing my orders are that she shall see no one."

Burns backed down in the face of this and before he departed while the doctor splattered with anger.

Mrs. Carman's story of the verge of a breakdown and her mother is reported to be dying. The condition of Mrs. Carman is said to be due to the bulldog methods of Detective Burns. As soon as Dr. Carman's handsome daughter aggressively walked up to the doctor's wife and, shaking his finger in her face, cried: "I'm going to get the murderess!"

District Attorney Smith will present to the Grand Jury of Nassau County, Thursday, all the evidence his detectives have collected and ask for the indictment of a woman as the accessory who thrust a hand through the door and shot Mrs. Bailey to death.

Bitter warfare has developed among the county officials as a result of the investigation into the murder and it was learned today that the chief cause of Detective William J. Burns and his aides being called into the case. In the warfare the district attorney and Sheriff Pettit are aligned against Acting Coroner Norton. The sheriff charged today that an attempt was being made to balk justice.

"We will no longer submit to being balked," he asserted. "This case is not an unsolvable mystery. A definite step must be taken. No man murdered Mrs. Bailey. We shall present our evidence to the Grand Jury on Thursday and an arrest may be looked for at any time after that.

Reprimand General Evans for Speech

WASHINGTON, July 7—Brigadier-General R. K. Evans, acting commander of the Department of the East, was reprimanded today by Secretary of War Garrison in a letter forwarded to the general for his criticism of the foreign policy of the administration. General Evans in a recent speech before the Sons of the American Revolution in New York found fault with the government's treatment of foreign affairs, and President Wilson decided the general was guilty of a serious breach of army discipline.

"Matters which became controversial and are aired in the newspapers," said Secretary Garrison, "are not matters which army officers should deal with. They create a bad impression abroad."

Canton Man Sues for Alienation

In the Dedham Superior Court today William Farrell of Canton filed a suit for $5,000 against Bernard Reilly for alienation of his wife's affections.

"No Man Murdered Mrs. Bailey; We Won't Be Balked," Says Sheriff

FREEPORT, L. I., July 7—Sheriff Pettit declares:

"We will no longer submit to being balked. Nor do we desire that this case be looked upon as an unsolvable mystery. We have decided that a definite step must be made. We feel that certain cross-purposes were creeping into this affair and have decided to let the Burns men solve the riddle.

"People cannot then say that serious effort is not being made. We know who planted the motor car agency card under the window through which Mrs. Bailey was shot. We know the origin of the false rumors which have been put forth with the idea of distracting attention from the guilty.

"We have decided that there must be rapid action. The solution of this mystery will be rapid likewise.

"No man murdered Mrs. Bailey. We shall present our evidence to the Grand Jury on Thursday. You may look for an arrest almost any time. That is as far as I can go now."

Dorothy Dix Insists No Woman Could Have Slain Mrs. Bailey

By DOROTHY DIX.

Sir Conan Doyle went back home not quite so much mystified by these parts another week or two we could have given him two murder mysteries to solve worthy of the most ingenious efforts of the great detective himself.

The first of these is, who killed Waldo F. Ballou, the Stamford, Ct., politician, and left him dying on the railroad track.

The second is, who slew Mrs. Louise Bailey in Freeport, L. I., as she was leaving the office of Dr. Edwin Carman.

So far both cases have defied solution and they are weirdly strange and alike in the fact that they appear to have been purposeless crimes. No motive can be assigned for their commission. Mr. Ballou was a gentle and harmless old man of sixty-seven, too old to be subject to that hot-blooded frenzy called a "crime passionnel," too old and too feeble to stand in the way of anybody's ambition. Why should he have been slain?

Mrs. Bailey was a pretty and popular and gracious young matron, a woman of the best type of the American domestic life. She had neither lovers nor rivals, so far as is known, and her husband says that she had never aroused the hatred or jealousy of any one. Why should any one have wished her dead, much less why any one would carry their hatred far enough to take her life.

Yet Mr. Ballou and Mrs. Bailey both were murdered within less than a week's time and we lack Sherlock Holmes to solve the mystery of their ends.

The strangest thing about the murder of Mrs. Bailey is the perfect simplicity with which the tragedy was staged and enacted, for she was killed, not at midnight in some lonely and sequestered spot, but at 5 o'clock of a Summer's evening, long before it is dark, in the very heart of a fashionable Summer resort, and in a house that is located on a popular drive that literally purrs of a Summer evening with automobiles.

Hundreds of people must have been passing the spot a minute before and a minute afterwards, yet in the midst of all this teeming humanity some one went unobserved across a lawn, raised a window, and fired a fatal shot, and then walked away undiscovered. It sounds incredible, but it is true. As Kipling says: "The thing that couldn't, has occurred."

The story of the killing is equally as mysterious and strange. Mrs. Louise Bailey, the wife of a wealthy business man at Hempstead, had spent the afternoon of Sunday visiting a woman friend in Rockville Centre. She left her friend's house at a little after 6 o'clock and reached the office of Dr. Edwin Carman some three or four minutes distant, about 7:30 o'clock.

Dr. Carman's office is in his house, which is a big, comfortable, frame dwelling set back about a hundred feet from the Merrick road, in a lot about a hundred feet wide. A pretty, thick green carpet covers the yard, that would effectually muffle the sound of any footsteps. Dr. Carman's house stands quite like a hundred and fifty feet from the next neighbors, and in the rear yard is a thick shrubbery, cutting off the view between the two houses, but in the physician's yard there is no shrubbery, so that any one approaching the office could easily be seen from the street.

The office is a typical country doctor's office, a good-sized room cluttered with the paraphernalia of his professional calling. A big desk, a couch, an operating chair, a white enamelled cabinet full of surgical instruments and several chairs. A door at the end of the room gives a little entrance or exit for patients to the side of the office are two windows, rather high from the ground. Before one of these windows is the doctor's desk and chair. The window was covered with a screen, hinged at the top, and flapping loose at the bottom, easily raised. Then came the glass window, covered inside with a lace curtain of white lace.

When Mrs. Bailey called on the physician's office was filled with people, but Mrs. Bailey recalled herself to him by saying that she had consulted him about certain pains and aches about two weeks ago, had met him in Hempstead at the house of a friend where she had been called in to see.

Dr. Carman says that he examined Mrs. Bailey for heart and found trouble, but, finding nothing seriously amiss, told her that the thought she was suffering from was a touch of malaria, and he gave her some quinine and a bottle. Then she arose to leave and he turned to accompany her as far as the door.

33 PERSONS KILLED BY THE 'MAD AXEMAN'

CHICAGO, July 7—That the mad axeman, whose trail of tragedy runs through five States, had left his mark on the outskirts of Chicago was the belief today of Deputy Chief of Police Schuettler as a result of the quadruple murder in Blue Island, a suburb, of Jacob Mislich, his wife, their daughter and her infant, who were found in bed with their skulls crushed. In the murders the assistant chief sees the pitiless hand of the degenerate slayer sought by the police of the country for thirty-three similar crimes.

A bloody axe, which had been taken from the yard of a neighbor and left in a bedroom of the Mislich home, is the only clew thus far discovered by the authorities. The police today pointed out the fact that the details of almost all of the murders are similar, and in most cases the murderer's axe has wiped out entire families.

Thirty-three persons have been murdered in the past three years by blows from an axe in Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, Iowa and Illinois. The details of the crimes in practically every instance are the same.

A list of the "axe murders" follow:

H. C. Wayne, wife and child, and Mrs. A. J. Burnham and two children, Colorado Springs, Col., September, 1911.

Hollis Hudson and wife, Paola, Kas., June, 1912.

William D. Dawson, wife and daughter, Monmouth, Ill., October, 1911.

Mrs. Mary Wilson and Mrs. George Moore, Columbia, Mo., December, 1912.

William Shoman, wife and three children, Ellsworth, Kas., October, 1911.

J. B. Moore, four children and two girl guests, Iowa, June, 1912.

Mrs. Bertha Bernhardt, her son and two helpers, near Martin City, Mo., in 1911.

HUNDREDS SAIL ON FRANCONIA AND CINCINNATI

Two big liners, the Cunarder Franconia, and the Hamburg-American liner Cincinnati, sailed from Boston today for Liverpool and Hamburg, their decks thronged with passengers. The Cincinnati had 144 first cabin passengers and almost 500 in her third and fourth cabins. The Franconia had 240 first cabin passengers.

There were over a hundred New England passengers, including representatives of Boston department stores. Jordan & Marsh sent Daniel E. Walsh, wash goods buyer, and Joseph P. Hagan, white goods expert, on the Franconia, and on the Cincinnati sent Miss Elizabeth D. Nolan, millinery, and Miss A. Darlington, misses' goods. Raymond A. Suits, designer for the Paine Furniture Company, went on the Franconia to visit England, France, Switzerland and Italy, while Charles A. Hanley, Oriental rug buyer for Margrave Houston Company, went on the Franconia for the Orient.

Mr. Hanley said: "The sailing facilities now at Boston, and the service to be had on the liners sailing from this port, are unexcelled. I have touched all the big ports, and I know whereof I speak.

"I have persuaded a New York salesman to sail with me on the Franconia. He was planning to sail from New York. Mr. Magrane wants all his salesmen to sail from Boston. And there is no question but what the service of all lines now sailing from this port is of the highest type."

Special Notice No. 1

July and August are the most trying months of the year for those who work in department stores. Consequently, we have determined to open the store at 10 o'clock on Wednesday, in order to give our employes an opportunity to get their stocks in shape after the great 17-Hour Limited Monday and Tuesday Sale.

This 17-Hour Limited Sale has grown in a few weeks to such gigantic proportions that hundreds of odd lots and broken lines of merchandise are created by these two strenuous days. Our salespeople require an hour or more each Wednesday morning to get their stocks in shape for business. Incidentally, this will enable us to put out a lot of special bargains at 10 o'clock Wednesday, which we believe will attract a large crowd of people to the store.

These special bargains will not be advertised, but will be in the nature of a surprise party for our customers.

Should we find by the amount of business done on Wednesday and Thursday that this arrangement does not meet with your approval, we reserve the right to change the opening hour back to 8:30.

Our stocks are the newest and cleanest in Boston, the store having been open less than four months and scarcely any merchandise here now more than six weeks. Our motto is, "Start right and stay right," and we intend to keep our stocks the cleanest and newest in Boston.

Everybody cuts prices in July, but you will find that W. & A. Bacon Co. will cut deeper than the others in order to accomplish the above purpose.

Special Notice No. 2

Thousands of Special Bargains

Special Notice No. 4—Field Day

A liberal percentage of the day's sales on Wednesday will be presented by W. & A. Bacon Co. to the W. & A. Bacon Mutual Benefit Association to be used for defraying expenses of Field Day to be held at Spring Grove, Wellesley, Saturday, July 18th. Immediately after the store closes at one o'clock, Saturday, July 18th, our employes will be transported to Spring Grove, Wellesley, by special cars, where they will enjoy dancing, baseball and athletic sports—a big dinner to follow. To fatten the purse for Field Day and make it a tremendous success, we will offer on Wednesday an extra large number of special values at extra low prices to insure an extra big day.

BOSTON'S SUMMER AMUSEMENTS

"Meistersingers" in Clever Bill at Keith's Theatre

One day has passed of the last week of uncertainty to hear the glorious strains of their glorious scenic spectacle, "In Gloucester," at Keith's Theatre. The sons of A. Canavan beside Inez and Arthur P. Cole and Harold A. Tripp (scarce, charmed souls but previously privileged to hear the famous male singers in their native haunts on the Mediterranean) have been working hard and long. Their efforts were rewarded last night by a most enthusiastic audience which was in the mood for singing and applauding.

It was the first Boston performance of Miss Cole and Mr. Tripp in their delightful entertainments "The Enchantress" and "The Enchantress' Necklace." Although unacquainted as an extemporaneous comedian with the big city and consequently ignorant with the dry manner the locals cherish, Mr. Tripp soon had the audience made to go with it wave displayed by the Boston public when "impossible" is the word. The songs of Miss Cole and Mr. Tripp were real gems, and the Boston audience real appreciative. Miss Cole's singing of Zeke and Hiner in "The Bridge" and "The Owl" was tuneful, the "Lafee Trio," funny numbers, were also applauded.

Tremont Temple.

Perhaps no more remarkable effects have been shown by the means of motion pictures than those depicting the work of New York, Gloucester and Chicago. White Sox, now being known at Tremont Temple, were ever thought by rumors. The ball games under night skies and with the widely interested audiences themselves worth the price of admission.

Scollay Square Olympia

"A Day at Ellis Island," a very unusual motion sketch, topped the bill at the Scollay Square Olympia last night. Other features were the three Hayashima Brothers, the Harvey Trio, Harry Edell, the Ash and Shaw, Jones Brothers, and numerous other popular vaudeville features in addition to the latest released films.

Modern Theatre.

"Brewster's Millions," the celebrated comedy in which Edward Abeles starred at the Colonial Theatre some years ago, is being shown on the film with Abeles in his famous part at the Modern Theatre this week. There is surrounding it an attractive bill.

Plymouth.

The Plymouth trip upon the spacious and comfortable steamer Betty Alden is one of the most agreeable ways to spend a day. The boats leave Howard's Wharf every day at 10 and return by 6. Ample time is allowed there to dine at any of the famous inns of Plymouth.

Orpheum.

At the Orpheum last night "The Magpie and the Jay," that famous vaudeville playlet which contained both grand opera stars, was given by a strong cast. The program contained a long list of variety numbers and of course many extremely interesting and amusing motion pictures.

St. James.

Mrs. Louis James and company presented that clever comedy of domestic life entitled "Holding a Husband" at the St. James Theatre last night. It topped a long and attractive bill which included many fine pictures and a very effective vaudeville bill.

Winthrop Casino.

The patronage at this charming addition to the life of Winthrop is rapidly increasing. The fact that the casino features celebrated solo dancers and that it is possible to dance in the new dances may have something to do with the popularity of this resort. This week Hugh Payne and Betty Winifred, the solo dancers, have made a big individual hit.

Villa Napoli.

It is always cool at the Villa Napoli no matter how hot it may be elsewhere. The Cabaret plan which includes Bessie Warren, Edna Ayer, Ida Gardner and Peggy Stuart is very popular. The past patrons of the house can testify to the excellent meals and the short dinner and Italian cuisine.

Paragon Park.

Visitors to Paragon Park last night found a new and attractive show in the Cabaret, novelty features in the open air circus and a more popular dansante than ever. Mlle. Emerie proved interesting in plastic poses, reproducing famous statuary with with novel color effects. The Church Sisters in a dancing specialty made a hit. The pretty and vivacious Cabaret girls are always successful. The three sessions in the dansante, where Jean Thompson and George Schaffer are performing were all well attended.

Bass Point.

Bass Point has fairly recovered its old time supremacy as a result of the excellent service from Boston by the Nahanton line as well as the Bay service between Revere and Bass Point. With perfect facilities for reaching this popular resort and with the multiplicity of attractions, including the famous shore dinners, it is not surprising that many thousands enjoy themselves here upon every fine day.

Provincetown.

The steamer Dorothy Bradford leaves every morning at 9 o'clock for Provincetown and returns each evening at 6:30. The sail is one of the most entrancing out of Boston and the historic and picturesque features of Provincetown make it one long to be remembered.

Lexington Park.

Lots of attractive girls and funny men get plenty of opportunity in the musical show at Lexington Park this week. This celebrated resort has many attractions beside its rustic theatre, and boasts of a good dance hall and fine restaurant.

Nantasket Beach S. S. Co.

Nowhere in America is there a better conducted service than that maintained by the Nantasket Line. The boats are large and finely appointed and they carry many thousands daily in and day out with never an accident. There is a sail of one half hour during the rush hours and the last boat leaves the beach at 10:45.

Norumbega Park.

"Buster Brown," a musical comedy, with lots of pretty girls and funny comedians, is the attraction this week in the theatre at Norumbega. Harold West plays the title role. Trolley car service is frequent now from the Dudley street elevated, Park street subway and Newton Corner.

REMARKABLE LIFE ROMANCE OF 'CHIP' ROBINSON, GUNMAN

CHAPTER VII.

"Man, false man, smiling, destructive man?" (Nathaniel Lee—1655-1692.)

"Chip" Robinson emerged from the Kentucky State Prison at Frankfort a dangerous man. Two years' association with the criminals in that institution had graduated him several notches higher (or lower) in the underworld.

He had learned, for one thing, that petty robbery, picking pockets and the like, does not pay, in the lawless sense of the phrase.

Robinson apparently determined to rise to greater achievements in his sphere. He paid more attention than ever to his appearance. He bought—for he always seemed to be in funds—several suits of clothes of best quality, well cut and not too conspicuous in pattern. His shirts, ties, boots and other accessories were in harmony with his suits. His shirts and underwear were of silk. His boots cost $7 to $8 the pair. He was inclined toward gray silk or kids gloves. The police have a theory that he chose gloves of these materials because they are smooth or slippery," as the police say, and enable the wearer to manipulate his hands in another person's pocket with greater dexterity.

POLITE TO WOMEN.

Prison life had not rendered Robinson's manner coarse. He retained his debonair presence, his easy deference to whatever women and girls whose favor he sought for any purposes of his own. He acquired a discriminating taste in diamonds and he carried his cash in $100 bills in the secret pockets he had made in his several suits.

Robinson was in the prime of vigorous, active manhood. He kept himself in first-class physical condition. His brain and muscles "co-ordinated," as surgeons say. That is, the impulse of the brain to action was followed instantly by the muscular movement. When he wanted to strike he struck, quick and hard. He was a splendid animal, from the merely physical standpoint.

Consideration of Robinson's career from this time one leads to the belief that he had come to the resolution not to be arrested if he could. "See 'em coming," as he expression goes.

He carried a revolver—for use. He may have carried one earlier in his career, but it was not until this later period that he was suddenly to become known as a man "on the shoot."

Consistent with his practice of having the best, Robinson carried an automatic, the deadliest weapon known to the police for fighting at close quarters.

Naturally quick with his hands, Robinson could draw this revolver and discharge it with expertness. Here the same pre-natal influence which is believed to have been latent in the man's bizarre nature may have become more potent.

Robinson's own mother, now at Washington Courthouse, was asked the other day if she believed her son entered willfully into the crimes charged against him. The despairing woman replied:

"I am something of a fatalist, and, I believe, that if Lawrence went into those crimes it is because he was the victim of circumstances."

When this statement of the mother became circulated about Washington Courthouse it was accepted as a part of the pre-natal theory, vouched for by the woman who, of all on earth, would know whereof she spoke.

STRING OF ALIASES.

Robinson also rejoiced, by this time, in a string of aliases which is one of the hall-marks of the professional crook. He had traveled under the names of Albert Scott, George Roberts, Albert Adams, George Spencer, Walter E. Spencer and Harry Burton.

But he was best known under his own name of Robinson, with the soubriquet of "Chip," or "Diamond Chip," on account of his liking for the queen of jewels. His regular "moniker," as the underworld has it, was "Diamond Chip" Robinson, a title which seemed to fit him nicely.

Swaggering thus through life, "Diamond Chip" Robinson struck up an ill-fated partnership with another underworld character named Walter Lawrence, to criminals known as "Topper."

"Topper" Lawrence was not of the same bold, reckless strain as Robinson. But he did not lack nerve for illicit enterprises and he and Robinson, traveled amicably enough together until Fate, or their own evil desires, suddenly put a desperate turn in their affairs.

"Topper" and "Diamond Chip," according to positive statements of police and Pinkerton detectives, entered the city of Grand Rapids, Mich., in the middle of last September.

They were bent on the most flagrant breach of the law which so far has been published about Robinson. They were planning to rob a jewelry store.

In this determination they apparently reckoned little of the elaborate service that the Jewelers' Security Alliance offers for its members. This service is mainly a prosecuting one. Like the Federal Government, this J. S. A. never forgives nor forgets. It will follow an offender against one of its members "until the end of time and then some," to quote the expression of a Pinkerton man this week.

Crooks know that if they rob the store of any member of the Alliance a reward, commensurate with the amount of booty secured, will be offered for their capture, that the dreaded Pinkertons will be put on the case and that the police of the country will be asked to look for them if any clew to their identity can be obtained.

"HANDS UP" ORDER.

Despite this deterrent "Topper" Lawrence and "Diamond Chip" Robinson planned not only to rob one of the principal jewelry stores in Grand Rapids, but also to "pull off the job" in daylight. A robbery of this nature is one of the boldest that a crook can undertake.

With consummate impudence the two men selected the store of John J. Thompson for their work. The Thompson store is within two blocks of the Grand Rapids Police Station. It is on a busy street, which is constantly patrolled. On account of the proximity of the police station any number of patrolmen, sergeants, detectives and plain-clothes men are likely to be strolling by the Thompson store, in addition to the regular men on the beat.

The two robbers took the latter part of the afternoon, when people were hurrying from work, as the time for their deed. This was a clever move, as long as it was to be a daylight job, as the more pedestrians the more confusion in which to make the necessary "getaway."

Both men went armed. "Topper," as the police declare in the light of later events, carried a .38 calibre revolved of ordinary pattern. He was not a practised "gunman" and his weapon was not even well cleaned.

"Diamond Chip" was armed with an automatic, oiled, loaded and deadly.

In the Thompson store at this hour on September 18, last, were John N. Thompson, cousin of the proprietor; Edward Smith, a cashier who had just come to turn in his collections for the day, and Paul Townsend, a watchmaker who was in the workroom in the rear of the sales room.

There were no customers in the store. Thompson, Smith and Townsend were busy finishing their day's work, as it was near closing time, when "Topper" and "Diamond Chip" entered.

As Smith and Thompson looked up to see what was wanted, two revolvers were flashed on them, accompanied by the savage order:

"Hands up!"

(To Be Continued Tomorrow.)

Freight Yard "Unsightly."

PROVIDENCE, July 7.—The City Plan Commission will recommend, it is said, the elimination of a portion of the freight yard of the New Haven road at a conference, Wednesday, at the office of Mayor Gainer. Objection has been made to the unsightly approach to the State House which leads at present through the freight yards.

Flee Charlestown Fire.

The occupants of the three-story wooden house owned by Ellen Donovan, No. 36 Washington street, Charlestown, fled the house when fire was discovered in the cellar early today.

Aviator Hamel's Body Found.

PARIS, July 7.—A body which is thought to be that of Gustave Hamel, the English aviator, who disappeared during a Channel flight, has been found by fishermen in the sea off Harfleur, on the coast of France near Dunkerque.

Franconia Cook Killed.

While returning to the Cunard Liner Franconia, on which he is an extra cook, Thomas Fallon, thirty, of Liverpool, Eng., was killed by a freight train on the Cunard Wharf, East Boston.

The Head Nurse Says:

"It is in time of sickness that clean blood and right living show their value."

One can begin today to make clean blood and build healthy body and brain—proper food will do it.

All of the essential body and brain-building elements are found in and cream.

Grape-Nuts

Grape-Nuts food is made from whole wheat and malted barley. It contains all the nutriment of the grain, including the mineral elements (phosphate of potash, etc.) that are so necessary to health.

These elements stored under the outer coat of the wheat and barley are all retained in making Grape-Nuts—

Facts About the Big Battle.

Combatants—Willie Ritchie of the United States, present title holder, and Freddie Welsh, lightweight champion of England.

Scene of Fight—Olympia Stadium in London.

Referee—Eugene Corri.

Purse—Ritchie guaranteed $10,000 or 50 per cent. of the gate if he loses.

This is the first fight for the lightweight championship of the world to be held in London for eighteen years.

Ritchie won his title from Ad Wolgast in the United States in 1912.

By JACK M'AULIFFE.

Only retired undefeated lightweight champion of the world.

I have been asked my opinion of the outcome of the Willie Ritchie-Freddie Welsh fight for the lightweight championship, to be contested at the Olympia in London this evening.

As the first lightweight champion under the Marquis of Queensberry rules and titleholder for thirteen years, I believe I am qualified to venture an expert opinion.

It is this: Welsh will be awarded the decision over Ritchie at the end of the twenty-round fight, and England will for the first time boast of a lightweight champion of the universe.

Right here I wish to enter a protest to the powers that be in the boxing realm. If there be a controlling body of the sport I would advocate that they immediately adopt a measure whereby it would be impossible for a champion in any division to be dethroned unless his adversary score a knockout over him.

TITLE BOUT TO A FINISH.

I believe it is unfair for a champion to be compelled to yield his title simply because a rival proves a superior boxer in a limited number of rounds.

Things should revert to the old order, when a man had to knock out a champion in a finish fight before he could be proclaimed champion of anything.

In the good old days championship contests always went to a finish, and that, in my humble opinion, is the only way to determine such an important matter as a championship title.

Should Welsh outpoint Ritchie and gain the referee's decision, and with it the world's lightweight championship does that prove that Welsh is a better man than Ritchie, who is every inch a fighting champion?

Wouldn't it be unjust to deprive Ritchie of his hard-earned laurels merely because Welsh managed to keep away from him and slightly outbox him for twenty rounds?

That, to my mind, would prove absolutely nothing, except the unfairness of the method now in vogue.

I am not cynical. I do not want the readers of the AMERICAN to get the impression that I am rooting for Ritchie to lose and have the lightweight championship go to England.

On the contrary, I am pulling hard for a Ritchie victory, so that the title will remain in America, where it rightfully belongs, and where it has been kept ever since I won the supreme honors in the 133-pound division.

I was the first champion of the lightweights under the Marquis of Queensberry interpretations of the rules, and held the title for thirteen years, never suffering a setback in all that time.

LOOKS FOR WELSH VICTORY.

Were the coming match to be decided anywhere but in England I would be first to declare myself for Ritchie. But conditions impel me to make the declaration that Welsh will win on points tonight.

The way I view it, the only manner in which Ritchie can hold on to his title is to knock out Welsh. And I sincerely hope he does it, even at the cost of being looked upon as a poor depester. I certainly want the title to remain in America.

This will be the first international contest for the lightweight championship since George Levigne and Dick Burge fought their memorable battle at the National Sporting Club, London, some sixteen years ago.

The important point for my line of reasoning in believing that Welsh will win the referee's award on points is that he will do the leading.

That is all an English referee can see in judging a bout in England, and Welsh is an adept at leading, in fact he is a master hand at this art.

An English referee has eyes only for the boxer who does the most leading, and if Ritchie permits Welsh to do most of the leading in the forthcoming bout the American will come back to America minus his coveted title, as Welsh will then surely be adjudged the winner.

20,000 TO SEE RITCHIE AND WELSH FIGHT

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, July 7.—An unprecedented crowd of 20,000 persons, among them men and women of every rank from court circles to street sweepers, will attend the championship fight between Willie Ritchie, holder of the world's lightweight title, and Freddie Welsh at the Olympia stadium tonight.

Welsh is a slight favorite in the betting today at 5 to 4, but numerous bets were made at even money.

This is the first time that the lightweight crown has been fought for in England since George Kid Lavigne beat Dick Burge in seventeen rounds eighteen years ago. For nearly a score of years English lightweights have sought to bring back the lightweight laurels to Great Britain.

Frank Erne took the belt from Lavigne and Erne lost it to Joe Gans, the clever American negro. Battling Nelson, one of the gamest fighters the ring has ever known, captured the crown from Gans and put all comers in many hard fought ring battles until he was beaten by Ad Wolgast.

Wolgast lost to Ritchie on November 28, 1912. In the year previous Ritchie had lost a twenty-round bout to Welsh in California and it has rankled in the little American's breast ever since. That is why every one has said that this will be a grudge fight so far as Ritchie is concerned.

ENGLAND IS FIGHT MAD.

All England is fight mad. The London papers were filled today with stories of the care and condition of the two fight gladiators. London is crowded with American tourists at present. Many Yankees came expressly from New York or from Paris, Rome and Berlin to see the combat. All are betting on covering the Yankee champion. They are backing their sentiments with good American dollars, but there is no scarcity of Welsh money.

For nearly four hours Welsh men have been routing into the metropolis to attend the contest. With a single voice they predict "Freddie Welsh of Wales will be the next lightweight champion of the world."

Both boys rested in London today. Both are trained to a hair. Both are the personification of confidence. Welsh, while not predicting that he will knock out his highly opponent, is sure he will be able to go the twenty rounds, and at no points. Ritchie prophesies that he will knock out the little Welshman before the end of the fifteenth round.

WILL FORCE FIGHTING.

Ritchie is going to be the aggressor. Welsh will rely upon his old time tactics of speed and caution. He will exercise the rule of "feel first" while watching for an opening. Welsh is faster with fists and feet than the American, but Ritchie has the advantage in punching strength. A remarkable feature of the fight is the makeup of the crowd. For the first time in the history of the British prize ring there has been a persistent demand from women for seats. Among the ringsiders were women of the nobility, whose position give them entree to court circles. Talking their cue from these women of fashion the "climbers" thought it to go one better by giving "fight parties."

It is expected that there will be about 11,000 Americans there, while the lure has extended into the ranks of science and politics and among the spectators tonight will be many men noted far beyond the borders of England.

START 8:30 BOSTON TIME.

Eugene Corri of the National Sporting Club, who was selected to referee the bout, said that the opening round would begin at 9:30 p. m. (4:30 Boston time), following a preliminary contest, scheduled to commence at 8. It was estimated that the receipts would aggregate close to $125,000.

Ritchie was guaranteed $10,000, with the option of 50 per cent. of the receipts if he should lose his title. The American was also given another opportunity to fight Welsh in the event that he loses his championship crown. In the event of defeat, Ritchie will be given a chance to fight the Welshman next Fall.

The curious British custom of having clergymen for masters of ceremonies at big fights will be followed. The Rev. Everard Digby, who officiated in that capacity at the Wells-Bell battle, had volunteered, but upon request of the Bishop of Stepney he withdrew and a Catholic priest was selected instead.

WELSH RULES FAVORITE CHAMPION ON SHORT END

RIVAL LIGHTWEIGHTS BOTH CONFIDENT OF WIN

By WILLIE RITCHIE.

Kindly inform my American friends that I was never in better shape in my life and will win from Welsh sure. I expect to land a knockout.

Just before my dinner last night I weighed exactly 134 pounds. The cut received while training is healing fast and I don't think it will bother me.

We are now living in a private house just opposite the Olympian, where I will rest until I am called to defend my title.

By FREDDIE WELSH.

I won twice as many matches as Ritchie did before he won the championship and seven times as many since. Consequently I believe my greater experience, speed and ring generalship are superior to his reputed strength and punch.

I am the British lightweight title holder, so if championship honors bring confidence to Ritchie I should not lack that quality, either.

WELSH'S RECORD IN THE ROPED ARENA

Defeated Willie Ritchie, 20 rounds, Vernon, Cal.

Jimmy Duffy, no decision, 10 rounds, Buffalo.

Defeated Matt Wells, 20 rounds, London, Eng.

Defeated Hughey Mehegan, 20 rounds, London, Eng.

1913.

Defeated Young Jack O'Brien, 15 rounds, Vancouver, B. C.

Defeated Dick Hyland, 12 rounds, Butte, Mont.

1914.

Defeated Joe Rivers, 20 rounds, Los Angeles, Cal.

Defeated Joe Mandot, 10 rounds, New Orleans.

Johnny drawled when I had called his attention to that fact. "But really, y' know, it does not matter much, does it, there are so many champions these days; and, besides, Ritchie has never fought over here, has he?"

The odds of 6 to 4 on Welsh is one of the astounding results of this pathy that seems to dull Londoners whenever anything they don't know all about is offered.

They don't like Welsh much, but at the least they know him and his ability. Their argument seems to be that surely nobody who has not performed "over hyah" can possibly be as good as a man who has.

RITCHIE ARRIVES AT ARENA.

Another result of this unusual state of affairs is the fact that the advance sale of seats is actually less than it was for the Wells-Bell farce, although the scale of prices is almost three times as high.

However, the promoter of both fights tells me that last week he expected to be lucky to break even but made a nice profit when more than $15,000 was paid at the arena after 7 o'clock on the night of the fight.

Doubtless all empty seats will be taken by late comers who will trust to luck to get what they want at the Olympia tonight.

Ritchie came to town yesterday from Brighton and moved into private apartments within a block of the big arena where he will stay until it is time for him to enter the ring.

YANKEE IS CONFIDENT.

I saw Ritchie last night in a box at a music hall. He looks happy and confident and in magnificent shape.

"If I am on the short end of the odds," he told me, "anybody ought to be able to get at least 5 to 1 on the knockout proposition. It's a mighty good bet, Mr. Considine."

I think so myself and have already put up a few English equivalents of our five-dollar gold pieces at these odds with the Englishmen who think the champion will never have a chance to put over the finishing punch.

After weighing in at 2 o'clock this afternoon Ritchie will eat a big dinner. He expects to enter the ring weighing about 135 pounds. Welsh is due to arrive about 3 from Cardiff.

JACK JOHNSON AGREES TO BOX CARPENTIER

PARIS, July 7.—An agreement was made for a fight between Jack Johnson and Georges Carpentier, to take place in Paris in October. Johnson is guaranteed $20,000 by Theodore Vienne, who promoted the Johnson-Moran fight, plus 20 per cent. of the moving picture proceeds and 45 per cent. of the takings.

If Carpentier is beaten by Gunboat Smith on July 16 Johnson has the option of cancelling the match. There are also in progress negotiations for a fight between Frank Moran and Bombardier Wells, to take place at the National Sporting Club, London, the end of the Summer.

BIG BASEBALL FIGHT ON; SIX CLUBS IN FLAG RUSH

By NICK FLATLEY.

We have with us today, ladies and gentlemen, the biggest baseball collision of the year—in the American League. Had Byron Bancroft Johnson, stalwart upholder of organized baseball and stern foe of revolutionary tactics, now that he has waxed prosperous through his own particular little revolution, tried to frame up a situation that would tend to keep the Federal League from out the public eye, he could not have patched up anything nearly as exciting as the battle in his own league.

Said Byron B., Charles Dedication Ebbets or the other Charles of regrettable memory Murphy of Chicago, never in their wildest spasms of press agency lily painting, could have dreamed of such fertile material for their efficient publicity agents.

BATTLE AMONG LEADERS.

It stands this way. Six teams are bunched within five games, and the six this afternoon get busy among themselves trying to untangle the snarl. It's an exclusive sort of affair, no outsiders allowed. Before they get through there will be some merry massacres, and the baseball fan will have a chance to forget all about business depression, peace conferences and other lesser sports.

The Senators, third, half a game before the Chicago outfit, engage with the St. Louis Browns, who just now are tied with the Red Sox in fifth place. It couldn't be beaten for an exciting mixup.

Right over the leaders figure in the standing:

	W.	L.	Behind leader.
Athletics	43	29
Detroit	42	34	3 games
Washington	39	33	3½ games
Chicago	38	33	4½ games
Boston	39	35	5 games
St. Louis	39	35	5 games

It can easily be observed that before the present week ends there's a very good chance of the first being last, and reverse English, in this right scramble.

The three big Eastern teams—Philadelphia, Washington and Boston—open the best part of the next month acting as hosts to the squads from the West.

This should give them quite an advantage, but the way the battle has been going it made little difference where a team was, the fur always flew.

Boston naturally it all het up over the chances of the Carrigans to cop, and getting down to facts, these same chances are mighty good. But they of course, the same thing might be said for any other of the leading teams.

GREATEST FIGHT ON RECORD.

The Athletics have a slight lead, but the strain of setting the pace is likely to tell. One of the best little things Connie Mack does, however, is keep his players going ahead wild when the going is toughest.

Ed Walsh is pitching again for Chicago. Ty Cobb will soon rejoin Detroit. Joe Wood is in form for the Red Sox. And so it is all along the line.

Everybody's waiting for everybody else to snap, and everybody's finding that in the American League just at present there are no snaps.

Just now the race resembles the fight in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," with the Athletics playing the part of Eliza and the other five the bloodhounds. Except that in this case there's civil war among the bloodhounds.

Soldier Delaney Beaten by McKay

NEW YORK, July 7.—Fred McKay, the Winnipeg giant has found one heavyweight whom he can beat. McKay met soldier Delaney in the main event of ten rounds at the Olympic A. C. in Harlem and in nearly every round the Soldier was the recipient of a volley of jabs, hooks and uppercuts that had him staggering around the ring.

Mack Releases Brown.

PHILADELPHIA, July 7.—Carroll Brown, who has been a member of the Athletics' pitching staff for three years, has been released to the New York Americans. Brown will join the New York club today.

Spencer-Griffin Draw.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Bert Spencer of Boston and "Darkey" Griffin, a Brooklyn boy, fought a draw in a ten-round bout at the Olympic A. C.

RED SOX AND WHITE SOX OPEN IMPORTANT SERIES AT FENWAY PARK TODAY

FIRST BATTLE OF RIVAL SOX IS POSTPONED

At 11 o'clock today the Red Sox management decided to call off the game scheduled between the Chicago White Sox and the home team, owing to rain and the heavy condition of the grounds at Fenway Park. There will be a double-header tomorrow.

Here we are again—the old Red Sox back onto more, full of fight; several barrels of ginger and cases of pepper. So they say. They must have plenty of these necessary ingredients, else they couldn't have made such a grand showing on their long trip just ended.

Well, here they are ready to keep up their fight for the pennant. Only a few games behind the leaders, they are well fortified to maintain a winning streak on home grounds.

Callahan's men beat our boys three games out of four—a most unexpected outcome of the series. But some of the Red Sox were thinking of Federal League offers just about then, so they couldn't play good ball.

Now that the "red" stuff is out of their systems (having been replaced by visions of world's series money) we all look for some first-class ball playing and frequent victories.

Gallivan's in Field for Semi-Pro Games

Congressman James A. Gallivan has placed one of the strongest semi-pro nines on the diamond this season under the management of John J. Sawtelle, former manager of the Norfolk A. A., which won the New England amateur championship in 1912. Sawtelle has secured the services of some of the best ball players in the semi-pro ranks and he looks forward to a very successful season. Bob Gill, the schoolboy wonder, will do most of the twirling.

Manager Sawtelle has Saturday, July 12, open, as well as the remaining Saturdays during the season, and would like to hear from the fastest semi-pro teams in New England. Address No. 27 Lauriat street, Dorchester. Tel. Fort Hill 5511, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.; Dorchester 3200-M, 7.30 to 9 p. m.

Germans May Still Enter for Davis Cup

NEW YORK, July 7.—R. D. Wrenn, chairman of the Davis cup committee, has cabled to Germany to ascertain whether the Germans had reconsidered their intention to withdraw from the international matches and would send a team to this country. About four weeks ago Germany officially notified the Americans that it would be impossible to send a team this year.

It was stated by the committee that of the German team came to this country it would compete on the courts of the Longwood Cricket Club on Friday.

$20,000 or Clabby and Carpentier Go

SYDNEY, N. S. W., July 7.—Georges Carpentier, middle-weight champion of France, has been cabled an offer of $20,000 to meet Jimmy Clabby of Hammond, Ind., claimant of the middle-weight championship of the world. The offer was made by promoters of the Stadium here.

Trolley League Game to Boom Salem Fund

The Yorreys of Brockton and the Taunton team of the Bay State Trolley League tied for first place in the league season just closed, and today to decide whether the deciding game will be played in Brockton or Taunton, July 15. The proceeds of the game will go to the Salem fire sufferers.

Track & Field

By FRED HOEY

The best Abel Kiviat of the Irish-American A. A. could do in his first competition since the Olympic games was to finish third in the 1-mile handicap at Philadelphia on Saturday. Johnny Taylor, the Irish-American runner, also lost to Ted Meredith, Cleaves for twenty miles a few years ago, in the event.

It required the combined efforts of the Pacific Southern Pacific and Rocky Mountain associations to turn in a 1-mile relay championship. This will be the last relay championship of any kind to be run off in the British Olympics.

Baltimore has something to look forward to athletically. In addition to the national track and field championships the Middle States and the Middle States rowing regatta, which will be held there next month, the Maryland State Schools Rowing Conference. The dates for these events are July 26 and 27. On the first day the eight-oared and four-oared barge races will be decided.

The fact that Arthur Duffey, former amateur sprint champion, will run 100 yards and Percy Donahey, the old professional with the same figures, will race against each other in the 100-yard event at Celtic Park, Long Island, on July 19, has put the boys to busy to leave me at rest.

Jack Mahler seems bound with a superstition that should spread to old timers. Jack suggests that the old timers have a smoker at a big hotel before the big B. A. A. indoor carnival. At the smoker trainers would be on hand and the old timers residing around Boston could take up the event.

Fred L. O'Brien, instructor at English High for the last three years, has several offers in view for coaching work next fall.

Dick Beetle, the old Syracuse University "all-back," is in town and expects to locate permanently. Dick can hurl the shot and if he can get in shape will probably wear the colors of the Irish-American A. C. Dick's long suit is carrying and he worked in this capacity in Boston for three years.

The annual field day and athletic carnival of St. Mary's Parish, of Ayer will be held in that place Saturday afternoon, July 19. The open handicap events are: 100-yard dash, 440-yard dash, 880-yard run, one-mile run, three-mile run and running high jump. The date for July 15 with Matt Cleary, of Island Park, East Boston, or Rev. Thomas F. Medlin, Ayer, Mass.

Boston Tennis Men Beat Veteran Stars in Davis Cup Trial

NEW YORK, July 7.—In the opening round of the test trial matches leading to the selection of the Davis cup defending team at the Country Club of Westchester, N. W. Niles and A. S. Dabney of Boston, beat William A. Larned and R. D. Wrenn, 6—3, 5—7, 6—1, and R. N. Williams and R. Lindley Murray, the Harvard-Leland Stanford combination, beat Robert Le Roy and E. F. Larned, 8—6, 5—6.

The matches in the second round were: Karl H. Behr and T. R. Pell beat H. H. Hackett and W. M. Hall, 6—1, 6—1; and G. M. Church and Dean Mathey beat G. F. Touchard and W. M. Washburn, 7—5, 6—4.

Five Sonder Boats in Trials for Kiel Races Next Spring

Five yachts have entered as competitors for the selection of three boats for the sixth series of German-American sonder races at Kiel next Spring. Of the number two were built this year, one for Commodore Herbert M. Sears of the Eastern Yacht Club and the other for Guy Lowell of the same club. Mr. Lowell has already been chosen.

The American trials will be held off Marblehead beginning August 24, and several contests will be sailed each racing day, provided the conditions are favorable.

The list of yachts entered for the American trials this year is as follows: Amic, Mrs. Guy Lowell; Cima, Guy Lowell; Elieu, Caleb Loring; Mingo, Herbert M. Sears, and Sprig, John L. Saltonstall.

WAR IS FEARED BETWEEN RIVAL ATHLETIC CLUBS

By FRED HOEY.

The fact that two of the representatives of the Irish-American A. C. of this city—J. B. Beebe and E. H. Niles—will be questioned because of their standing and records in previous meets may precipitate a war between the Boston Athletic Association and the Winged Shield men.

Both are alleged to have received prizes in intercollegiate meets, but members of other clubs aver that these men won their prizes in class meets and therefore are not eligible for a win in a handicap race.

Others who have followed the game for years claim that Billy Schick, the old Harvard wonder, was one to suffer under the same ruling.

There will be lively doings at the meeting of the registration committee of the New England A. A. U. to be held at the B. A. A. tonight. The three members of the committee of the Irish-American A. C., George V. Brown, manager at the B. A. A. team, and Secretary J. Frank Paced—will be on hand to settle all matters. The first matter of importance to be discussed will be the matter of an athlete wearing any insignia that signifies that he is a member of a rival club when the object is obviously to cover up an athlete who has yet to show his worth.

RIVAL CLUBS BOTH STRONG.

It is claimed that the B. A. A. team has almost thirty members who wear the orange and blue stripe on the side of the running trunks and who have not yet been awarded the unicorn for the breast.

Whether these men make good or not depends on the judgment of the B. A. A. officials on such events, yet these same athletes are practically tied up with the club which prevents other clubs from gaining their services.

The Irish-American Club is a young organization that is doing its best to put a strong team in the field, but if this club and the B. A. A. are to "sword" points it means lively competing, of course, but in the end it will do the amateur game no good.

The winged shield men made a thorough clean sweep in the indoor relay games. In accomplishing the stunt it must be remembered that the representatives from that club were conceded handicaps.

Frank X. Carroll, official handicapper, makes a proper suggestion when he says that all entries from clubs should forward their own individual entry.

This is as it should be. The custom has been to have the manager or track chairman forward a list of names on a sheet for meet admittance which event or events these men will enter.

NEW PLAN FOR ENTRIES.

This form has been a convenience, but it has been strictly against the rules. Handicapper McGrath has been in the game long enough to know that a change is necessary and that it can be made before the Fourth of July games on the Common there would have been no question about the standing of Beebe and Niles.

Oddly enough, Messrs. Facey, Brooks and Prout—who make up the registration committee—will be the games on the Boston Common on the holiday, so that when they meet tonight they will have the facts at first hand.

One prominent official of the A. A. A. says there has been too much effort put upon the managers of track teams, since this form is tabooed in amateur boxing there is no reason why it should be allowed to continue in the track game. This matter will also be discussed.

The matter of transfers—that is, from a college to a club team—will also be discussed tonight.

Their Married Life

Mrs. Stevens Tells Helen of Her Quarrel With Mr. Stevens, and the Real Cause

(Copyright, 1914, by International News Service.)

HELEN opened her eyes, conscious that the door had just been softly opened. The room was cool and dark and the pink silk curtains were blowing gently against the drawn blinds, but Helen felt vaguely irritated. Her head ached violently, and she remembered now that she had told Nora not to disturb her.

"I'm sorry to bother you, ma'am," said Nora, tiptoeing into the room, "but Mrs. Stevens would like to see you, she seems to be in trouble of some kind and I told her I would see if you were awake."

Helen raised herself on one elbow, and then forced herself to sit up, her head seemed to throb more with every move she made, but she smiled at Nora in worried expression.

"All right, Nora, I'll be out as soon as I can get some clothes on. Tell her I've been lying down and open the shutters for me before you go."

Nora unfastened the shutters and pulled up the shade, letting in a flood of sunlight, and Helen began fastening up her hair hurriedly. She didn't want to keep Mrs. Stevens waiting any longer than she could help. What if Warren should ever quarrel with her, she would need all sympathy and comfort she could get.

Slipping into a long frilly negligee, Helen finally burst out. She first sprayed her forehead with headache cologne, already the headache seemed to be growing less and she began to feel more like herself.

THE CONFESSION

"Oh, Helen," said Mrs. Stevens rising to meet her as she entered the room, "I hated to have you wake you, but I simply had to see you, things haven't improved a bit since I saw you the other day, and I am miserable."

"Perhaps it would help you to tell me about it," said Helen, sympathetically; she hated to force a woman's confidence, and yet she knew that was what Mrs. Stevens had come for.

"Perhaps you'll think me foolish, perhaps you won't even think it, but you'll never know just how I feel till you have to go through it yourself, and I hope you never will."

Helen was silent, and Mrs. Stevens finally went on:

"Do you remember little Minnie who came to Boston and went to work for Mr. Stevens in his office?"

"Oh, yes, the little girl we all felt so sorry for. I hope nothing has happened to the child?"

"O, no, nothing has happened to her aside from the fact that Mr. Stevens seems to have become violently attached to her," and Mrs. Stevens looked triumphantly at Helen to see what effect her words would have.

Helen did not look as surprised as Mrs. Stevens expected; in fact she laughed at the idea.

"Oh, Mrs. Stevens, that child! I'm sure you must be mistaken!"

"Well, he had her out to lunch twice last week and when I spoke to him about it, he refused to say anything!"

"Of course," said Helen reassuringly, "he probably didn't think anything of it. Why, the girl is a baby and it probably hurt him to think that you would speak to him about it in the way you did. Tell me, weren't you angry and didn't you say a lot of things you really didn't believe at all?"

"Well, perhaps I did, but how would you feel if Mr. Curtis should suddenly decide to take his typewriter out to lunch!"

Helen hesitated; to tell the truth such a thing had never occurred to her, and yet how easily it could happen.

"But don't you see, Mrs. Stevens, this circumstances have changed everything. Warren would have no cause to do such a thing whereas Mr. Stevens knew perfectly well he interested in this girl from the beginning. Surely there was some reason for his doing what he did. Didn't he tell you why he did it?"

HIS EXPLANATION

"Yes, he did try to explain, but I said I didn't believe him, and after that he refused to say anything more."

"What did he tell you?" And Helen leaned forward intensely interested.

"Some story about the girl going without food to send the money home, and he had taken her out simply because he was sorry for her and wanted to see her have a couple of good meals. He said that he would have given her the money, but he was afraid she would not spend it for food."

Helen's face cleared and she gave a little sigh of relief.

"And after that, what could you possibly worry about? Why, the whole thing is as plain as day. You know yourself how willingly you would have helped the girl if you had known how things were going."

"But Mr. Stevens might have mentioned it to me rather than have me embarrassed by outsiders."

"Did he say why he didn't?"

"He said he never thought a second thing about it, because Minnie was my protege from the first. Do you really think it's all right and I can feel that he has told me the truth?" And Mrs. Stevens looked up at Helen hopefully.

Helen leaned forward and took the other woman's hand.

"Don't you think there will be as much to forgive on his side now? Remember you have acted very childishly, and I believe that your husband was perfectly sincere with you from the beginning. You asked me to tell you what I thought, my dear, and I think you ought to go to him and say that you are sorry you doubted him even for a moment. Suppose it had been another woman, really a woman, who might have counted. It surely wouldn't improve things between you two to pick a quarrel. We women must guard our men carefully. They are very easily ruffled."

Mrs. Stevens squeezed Helen's hand.

"I know you're right," she whispered, "and I wanted to tell him I was sorry last night, but he looked so stern and forbidding. He hardly spoke to me through dinner, and I never closed my eyes all night long. I wanted to tell you about it that day I called when you were going out, but you were in such a hurry, so I just had to keep it to myself, till I just couldn't think about it any longer."

HELEN IS PLEASED

Helen was delighted with the turn things had taken, she was generally too timid about taking the initiative to give her opinions even when asked for them, but she had been genuinely sorry for Mrs. Stevens, and the idea of good-natured Mr. Stevens doing a thing of the kind struck her as absurd. She had been sure of being able to help Mrs. Stevens out of her dilemma, and she had so far forgotten herself as to speak out plainly just what she felt and knew to be true.

It had grown very dark, and as Helen rose to turn on the lights, Mrs. Stevens exclaimed at the time and gathered up her things to go.

"I don't go yet," Helen remonstrated. "Warren will be home in a few minutes and you haven't seen him in so long."

"Oh, but I must, cosy as you are here. It would never do to have Mr. Stevens come home tonight of all nights to a dark, cheerless apartment. I must be there to meet him and have things over as soon as possible!"

"I know that everything will be all right," said Helen as she walked with Mrs. Stevens to the door. "And I do appreciate your telling me about it. From now, there's your elevator, and good luck."

Mrs. Stevens waved as the elevator dipped down out of sight and Helen walked slowly back to the front room. It was cozy with the big davenport piled high with pillows and the shaded lights. Even the noise from the street made a pleasant humming sound, and as she stood leaning thought the key turned in the lock and Warren came in.

Helen ran out into the hall to meet him. As he kissed her, she could see that he was tired and out of sorts.

"Dear, Mrs. Stevens has been here all afternoon and I decided to make up with her husband. I really don't think it was his fault at all."

"His fault, of course it wasn't his fault," said Warren in his decided way. "There isn't a quarrel ought down than Stevens, I told you. Mrs. Stevens didn't know how to take him."

"But dear, you don't know anything about this quarrel, so how can you know which is in the wrong." In a way Mrs. Stevens was justified in believing the worst, before her husband had explained anything to her.

"The worst? What worst? Ten chances to one there wasn't any worst about it. Stevens has my sympathy all right. His wife is a regular nag."

What Dame Fashion Is Offering

Fully Described by Olivette

THE cape sketched in this picture on the left is particularly suitable for use as a sport or beach coat. It is made of unlined cloth called "Molleton." This comes in black, gray, white or "Chartreuse"—a shade of green very much in evidence this Summer.

The neck is finished by a square collar trimming the back and falling below a little round Medici collar. A wide tab passing through "Barrettes" of the material fasten the coat with two similar buttons. The edges are bordered by a stitching.

The much ruffled afternoon frock shown by this photograph on the right is one of the youthful and charming models that so piquantly typify the newly revived fashions of a by-gone day. It is of the finest white handkerchief linen. The bodice is a House fastened by small crochet bows. The elbow sleeves have tiny down pointed revers and a bow of Nattier blue ribbon holds them. A tie of Nattier blue finishes in a pump bow under the turn-down collar, and the same blue faille fashions the plain belt. The skirt is composed of three flounces separated by blue faille ribbons—and three puffins of plaited tulle make the lower part of the skirt, which shapes in a bit at the feet—OLIVETTE.

CHAPTER FOUR

An Unwilling Accomplice

DIXMER had his plan arranged very cleverly. Through Lindey, who was in command at the prison, Geneviève was to gain access to the courtyard while the queen took her daily walk. Geneviève was to carry a sheaf of red carnations over her arm which she was to offer to the queen as she passed. Should any one interfere, Lindey would no doubt give the queen permission to take the flowers, in the secrecy of which was fastened a note cleverly twisted into the heart of each flower.

"While passing before the prison canteen on the tenth Vendemiaire, Your Majesty must pretend to feel ill, and ask to be taken into the canteen. A trap door will open at your feet, and through it lies the way to freedom!"

On the day appointed, Geneviève took her place at the door of the courtyard, the sheaf of flowers over her arm. As Marie Antoinette passed the girl leaned forward pityingly and held the flowers out to the other woman. The queen took only one, which she fastened in her belt. Then, if another blossom had not been carelessly dropped in the courtyard, all would have gone well. The effect on gaining her cell hastily concealed the note in the wall, and at the same time one of the prison officials picked up the flower in the courtyard. Feeling something hard in the heart of the blossom, he took it to his room to examine it, but while he lay the thin slip upon his window sill preparatory to putting on his glasses, the wind blew it away. All its contents were never known. The man was infuriated, however, and hurried to the queen's cell to examine the flower and see what had taken. Nothing could be found in the flower or concealed about the room. The conspiracy of the red carnation was known only to the queen.

The Royalists had by now burrowed a hole through the house that joined her had taken, into the floor of the prison canteen. The next day, while the queen was walking in the courtyard, she staggered and would have fallen had not some one sprung forward and caught her. Another moment and she would have been on her way to freedom, but one of the soldiers, happening to go into the canteen ahead of the others, saw the trap door move slightly, and the next minute all was wild confusion. The Royalists fled back through the passage they had made, with the Revolutionists in hot pursuit. All the work of weeks gone for naught.

The queen was carried back to her cell in a fainting condition. The fact that her escape had been bungled was unnerved her that she was hardly able to stand. She had been told that this time there would be nothing to stand in the way of her freedom, and had it not been for the stray flower dropped unaware and picked up by a suspicious official the queen might have entered the canteen first and all might have gone well. As it was, things were much worse than before, for, fearing new conspiracies, Marie Antoinette was taken away from her little daughter and shut up in the prison of the Conciergerie, where she could be doubly guarded and where no messages of any kind could reach her. Her daily walk was also abolished, for no more risks could be taken.

Soon after, Lorin, Maurice Lindey's best friend, startled him with some unexpected news. He had been sent to Lindey with a note which he obediently delivered, and which commanded Lindey to arrest the Chevalier de Maison Rouge, who had been at the head of the conspiracy to release the queen. A newspaper article accompanied the note which read:

"In addition to the Chevalier de Maison Rouge, the traitor Dixmer and his partner Moraud are spoken of as being concerned in the plot."

That would mean that Geneviève would have to be drawn into the matter, the young man reflected. No doubt Dixmer would be hiding where the Chevalier was to be found, and there would be no other way out. Geneviève would have to be left with no one to provide for her in a time of terrible danger.

Tomorrow—Another Escape.

Having a Rest

"Well, Bill," said the temporarily retired burglar to his pal, "there's one thing we oughter be thankful for here."

"What's that?" said Bill.

"We ain't bothered much dodgin' motors or worrying over the high cost o' livin'!"

Household Suggestions

Used in water as a daily gargle, borax keeps the throat healthy. Used in water for cleansing the teeth, it "disinfects" them and prevents their decaying.

Here is a hint which will be found useful at house-cleaning time. Use sufficient flowers of sulphur to give a golden tinge to about one and one-half pints of water. Then add a pint boil about four or five bruised onions, or some garlic. Strain off the liquid, and let it stand till it is cold. Then take a soft brush, dip it in the liquid, and wash any of the gold framed pictures requiring cleaning. When it is dry, the gilding will be as bright as when new.

Cracks in furniture should be filled in with beeswax. Soften the beeswax until it becomes like putty, then press it firmly into the cracks, and smooth the surface over with a thin knife. Sandpaper the surrounding wood, and work some of the dust into the beeswax. This gives a finish to the wood, and when it is varnished the cracks will have disappeared. Putty used in the same way soon dries and falls out.

Blocks of camphor dispersed in all corners of damp rooms in a new house will effectively banish dampness in a short time, even when fires have proved ineffectual. They should be simply laid on paper, or on the bare shelves of a damp room or linen closet. The blocks gradually decrease in size, and when they finally disappear should be replaced until their purpose is served.

For perspiring feet, bathe them frequently in cold water, to which a little ammonia has been added. After each bathing, dust the feet well over with boracic powder. Bathing in alum water will afford relief. Burning and tender feet require rinsing in nothing more strengthening to the feet than salt.

To remove paint from a dress take a camphor ball, dip it in water, rub it in turpentine, and just damp the parts that are stained. Let garment dry and then rub briskly, when the paint will fall off in a dust. It is then free all come off repeat the operation.

In order to insure a good gloss on starched collars, first mix the starch with cold water, add a tiny lump of butter about the size of a small marble, then pour on the boiling water.

A bag of salt standing where there is a smell of fish will absorb the aroma.

"Well, I've told you everything. What do you want me to say?" asked Anna, with a little flare of spirit. She was gathering her forces now to meet the insidious attack of Zoubatoff's suggestions. She knew that he meant to force her weary brain and voice into some suggestion that he could twist to his own purpose.

"NOT CREDIBLE"

Suggestion continued its slow progress.

"It is not credible that a slight girl like you could so easily put an end to one who was fully capable of holding his own with any man. Some strong hand must have been helping you."

"A man wouldn't use a hatpin for such work." The girl was goading herself to cleverness that should match this new daughter determination to incriminate her love. She would fight out with Raisa snapped in the journey that must let Rolfe go unscathed.

"Which not." A hatpin is much more dangerous in a man's hand than in a woman's," sneered Zoubatoff. He felt instinctively that Anna's spirit must break at last in her weary body.

"And I say he wouldn't use it. He has no need for such weapons with his strong hands."

"Ah! You're protecting him."

"He wasn't there. He wasn't there," moaned the girl, feeling a bit the hopelessness of impressing him with the truth.

"Then how does he know you killed the Baron?" continued the chief, quickly.

"Because—"

"Yes?"

"I—I—"

"Well, go on."

"I wrote to him," cried the girl, breaking down in her desperation.

Zoubatoff smiled in triumph. This witness would be very easy to manage, as he had foreseen. It was possible to trap the Jews after all, and to break them had always been a simple matter.

"I wrote to him!" cried Anna Mirrel.

"Telling him everything?"

"Yes—everything."

Zoubatoff leaned across the table and looked at her with the full measure of his hatred glaring from his eyes.

"Then why did you lie to me a moment ago and say that you didn't communicate with him?"

"Because I didn't want to drag him into it," moaned the girl.

The Chief motioned to his servants. "Enough. Take her away."

He felt sure that she had given him material with which to weave a chain of hearsay links about Rolfe.

As the soldiers seized her Anna Mirrel made a last desperate attempt to save the man she loved. She struggled in their rough grasp and cried in piteous tones in spite of their muffling arms and rough hands.

"Believe me—my brother believe me. I did it. I did it. I swear before God he wasn't there. He wasn't even there."

And with shrieks of Rolfe's innocence tearing themselves from her throat Anna was dragged away to the cells that opened—on Siberian exile.

"Call Count Rostov," commanded Zoubatoff unemotionally.

"Well?" smiled the Count as he came back into the room.

"It is evident that there are no Jews behind this girl, but my other suspicions are correct. Julian Rolfe—she wrote him a letter telling him everything."

"What are you going to do?"

"The best thing to do, Count. We must get that letter, then Mr. Rolfe shall accompany us to Siberia on his retirement. A little home in the Siberian Caspa at hard labor will silence them both."

The ways of the Okrana were occasionally beyond Zoubatoff. He had known the humanizing influence of a Continental education and of love for a girl with human ideals—it may even be that the full measure of Cossack cruelty was lacking from his nature.

"There is no charge against him," protested Nikki mildly.

"We will find a charge" smiled the other.

And then, most obligingly, the fly walked into the spider's web. A soldier announced a name to Pavlac and Pavlac rose and greeted the two who were discussing the fate of Julian Rolfe.

"Mr. Julian Rolfe," said he.

"What does Mr. Rolfe want" asked Zoubatoff suspiciously.

"To see Count Rostov," replied Pavlac.

"He has come to see about the girl," murmured the Chief suspiciously, and then he added, as the Count protested against the necessity of seeing him, "You must not appear as if you were avoiding him. Admit Mr. Rolfe."

"What can I say to him?" asked the Count weakly.

"Leave it to me. I am most anxious to find out what he intends to do. You must appear to be more ignorant as to the girl's whereabouts than Mr. Rolfe himself. As for me, the Okrana, like a cat, a cruel animal, chews the cud of reflection and knows nothing at all."

A little hatred glinted from Zoubatoff's face as Rolfe came quietly in to remain himself in the waiting room. The Count greeted him very frankly friendly as diplomacy advised, and Rolfe himself was shrewd in his unconsciousness of any situation to be glossed over. He brought with him the impression that even the Okrana's chief office an air of brassiness that seemed to fairly whirl away the sordidness of such a place.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

NOT IN BEST TASTE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

For the past six months I have been engaged to a young lady. Not very long ago one of her old sweethearts gave her a present. Was it right for her to accept it after we were engaged?

ANXIOUS.

IT was not in the best of taste, but perhaps your jealousy magnifies the wrong in it. If the former sweetheart is nothing and with this you must not quibble over the matter.

DEPENDS ON HIS PURSE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

How often should a young man give a young lady candy? Should he send it by a messenger boy or take it himself? Should he put his card in the box?

RAYMOND.

IF he can afford it, a box of candy is a pleasing gift to take whenever he calls, taking it for granted that he doesn't call oftener than once a week.

Neither his card nor a messenger boy, under the circumstances, is necessary.

YOU ARE RIGHT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl seventeen years old and am in love with a young man three years my senior. He tells me he loves me and I believe he does. He has asked me to marry him and I tell him to wait until I am eighteen years old, but he does not want to wait.

E. C. P.

YOU are too young to marry. If he is worth while he will decide you are well worth waiting for.

No Trouble to Keep Skin Free From Hairs

(The Modern Beauty)

There is no need for any woman to countenance superfluous hairs, because with a paste made by mixing some powdered delatone with water it is easy to get rid of them. The paste is applied for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed. This treatment will rid the skin of hair without leaving a blemish, but care should be taken to see that you get real delatone.

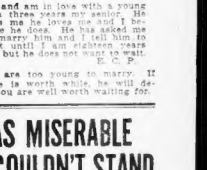
WAS MISERABLE COULDN'T STAND

Testifies She Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

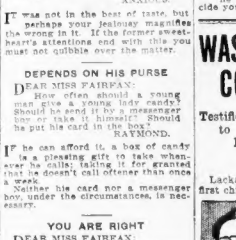
Lackawanna, N. Y.—"After my first child was born I felt very miserable and could not stand on my feet. My sister-in-law wished me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and my nerves became firm, appetite good, blood elastic, and I lost that tired feeling. I have had three children since. For female troubles I always take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it works like a charm. I do all my own work."—Mrs. A. F. KREAMER, 1574 Electric Avenue, Lackawanna, N. Y.



The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard remedy for female ills.

Women who suffer from these distressing ills peculiar to their sex should be convinced of the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health by the many genuine and truthful testimonials we are constantly publishing in the newspapers.

We challenge anyone to name even one other medicine that has been so successful in relieving woman's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.



Mlle Gabrielle Robinne, leading comedy actress of the Comédie Française, Paris, says: "The reason why Savon Cadum is the ideal soap for the skin and complexion is that it meets all their requirements."

Soaps containing an excess of alkali roughen the skin and spoil the complexion. Savon Cadum, the great French Complexion soap, is made under the personal supervision of an eminent French chemist, and is recommended as an effectual aid to nature in keeping the skin healthy, thus promoting natural beauty. WEBSTER TO FLY AT NANTASKET BEACH SUNDAY

So many good friends of the AMERICAN have let us hear how they appreciated Clifford Webster's flight at Revere Beach last Saturday that it has been decided to repeat the attraction next Sunday—this time at Nantasket.

Therefore, the AMERICAN today just wants to hint that tomorrow you will find in this paper a formal invitation to you all to come to Nantasket July 12—telling you when to come, and where, and what you will see when you get there.

The arrangements for this next Sunday's flight are already more way, but they are not yet complete. Webster will come, he will make a series of flights and again, like last Saturday, there will be the added delight in the experience from the fact that he will have a surprise for the thousands at the beach.

SURPRISE PROMISED.

Last Saturday 250,000 people saw him fly. Some had come on the AMERICAN'S invitation, but all were grateful to this paper for the exhibition staged within its gates.

Not so many will be able to go to Nantasket next Sunday. Two hundred and fifty thousand people make quite a crowd. But there will be room for all of them—make sure of that. So come, see Webster—and perhaps have a part in the mysterious surprise the AMERICAN and he will have prepared for you.

Webster's flights last Saturday were arranged to gratify the intense new interest in aviation which has developed with the growth of the proposed transatlantic flight. For two years or so people have been taking aeroplanes for granted—having recovered from the first wonder of the conquest of the air. But the people who were fortunate enough to see Webster fly on Saturday, and who had seen those first flights down at Squantum back in 1910, realized that the aeroplane of today is as much of an advance over the plane of those days as the automobile of today is over that of fifteen years ago.

THOUSANDS THRILLED.

The Burgess-Dunne plane Webster flies is serio-balancing, and peculiar twists of the wings are so contrived that no side wind of a hurricane and no mischance of the air short of a collapsing wing can overthrow it. A driver of ever ordinary skill can handle it, experts say, easily as he handles an automobile, and a great deal more safely.

To the horde of people at Revere this was plain to be seen. Webster climbed and dropped, lit on the water and rose from the water again, circled, made figure eights, rode a roller coaster in the air, and as a final feat, made a diving volplane, dropping almost sheer from 500 to 150 feet above the water, in a way that brought cries of alarm from all along the beach.

On his flight he dropped cards which admitted those lucky enough to capture them to the AMERICAN'S Home Office, entitled for awards ranging from $250. There will be some similar feature, yet to be arranged, in his flight next Sunday.

Most of us have dreamed of a day when aeroplanes will be safe enough for the average man. If you want to see how near that dream is to completion—go to Nantasket next Sunday. Tomorrow's AMERICAN will tell you all about it.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were lower today in the continued movement beginning soon after the start and there being no rally to afternoon. Trading was rather quiet, but almost as active as the record days in New York preceding the fire. There seemed to be a fair supply of stocks. This may have been due to the impression steadily gaining ground, that the sale decision will be less favorable to trade than was assumed a few weeks ago. During the morning the money rate in New York was 2% per cent.

The News Bureau says: "We understand that the New Haven executive committee will hold an important meeting in New York this afternoon."

Early in the afternoon in New York losses included Canadian Pacific, Southern Pacific ¾, Missouri Pacific 1¾, Reading ¾, Lehigh Valley ¾, New Haven ¾, American Cans ¾, Steel ¼, Amalgamated ¾, Baltimore & Ohio ¾, Union Pacific ¼ and United Copper ¼. Mexican Petroleum lost 2¾ and Studebaker 1¾.

In Boston Greene-Canaan ... has been quite active and off ... 2¾. It had previously touched United Fruit was up ¾ and ... previous range had been from ... to 141. Boston & Maine was ... and American Telephone ¼, while losses were New Haven ¼, Copper ¼, Arizona ¾, Granby ¾ and North Butte ¼.

TRADERS IN WAITING MOOD.

Traders continued in a waiting mood when markets opened ... disinclined to commit themselves ... until the Interstate Commerce Commission shall render its eastern freight rate decision. There were, as usual, a number of rumors concerning what it will be like and when made public. One was that the decision would be favorable and, therefore, it is expected to be sanguine that the ruling is made at any time after today.

As the opening most leaders were unchanged but the list was not active a few minutes. There was no recovery during the morning, but prices averaged small. Heaviness developed. Business was very dull over hour transactions in New York totaled less than 42,000.

Operations had been irregular in the local market, where the market again was in general. But most of showed losses. There was scarcity in financial circles on this when it was reported that the federal government loan of $160,000,000 had been heavily oversubscribed, which indicates that money is needed at the beginning of the European war is beginning to come out of hiding. The success of this loan is also to relieve tension in France, which has been affecting the world's money markets by its absorption of gold. About all of the $60,000,000 taken from this country this year went to Paris.

PRICE RANGE NARROW.

There was a narrow range to prices everywhere up to afternoon. In New York they indicated little more than indecision. It is expected that the government crop report tomorrow, the first to cover corn, will be very bullish. An improvement in the steel trade is reported, but it is believed in some quarters that on Friday in its report for June the United States Steel Corporation will show an increase in unfilled tonnage. Copper metal is rising. From 13⅝ to 14 cents a pound was asked today for electrolytic by the largest selling interests. It is understood that recent sales at lower figures may have exceeded 100,000,000 pounds. As regards general business, the consensus of opinion is that it will improve by Autumn, although no boom is expected then. There is no change in the political situation in Washington, but fears insist that Congress will not adjourn before December. There is comment in political and financial circles on the independence shown by the Senate Banking Committee in regard to nominations by President Wilson for the Federal Reserve Board. Some people think it a sign that his power over Congress has begun to wane. It is favorable but prospects for his party at November elections. Nobody loves a loser.

BOSTON ELEVATED'S ADVANCE.

One explanation of the advance of Boston Elevated is that for the fiscal year just begun the road may be able to pay a 6 per cent dividend.

It is reported that during the first half of 1914 new business booked by General Electric was $12,800,000 or so less than for the corresponding period of 1913, a decrease of more than 21 per cent.

In the last fiscal year Granby copper production was approximately 1,500,000 pounds less than for the preceding one, and it is said that dividends paid during the last nine months were not at all times fully earned.

Mexican Petroleum was strong in Boston today because of the report for 1913 and by midday was showing a gain of almost three points.

Chesapeake & Ohio's net for May decreased $112,914, but for eleven months there was an increase of $501,951.

Studebaker sold nearly two points higher because of encouraging reports concerning the automobile industry.

When H. B. Claflin Company receives report to the United States District Court tomorrow notice will be learned about the condition of that great dry goods concern.

A Reverend Archbishop on Woman Suffrage

He Talks More Like Pontius Pilate Than Like the Good Protestant Episcopal That He Is Supposed to Be.

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company.

The Archbishop of Canterbury is the most imposing and solemn thing that they have in England. He is the head of the Church of England. When they put the crown on the King's head he is the foremost of all the Bishops who humbly say: "We, the Bishops, though unworthy,"——

His Grace of Canterbury has made a speech on woman suffrage, which shows that it is possible to be the head of the Church of England and lack information.

Perhaps before the militant suffragettes get through he will know MORE.

Among other things he said:

"The outstanding feature of the controversy is the deep pathos of seeing splendid energy and self-devotion distorted and misHandled by a little group in a manner so mischievous. What results is inevitable in harming the very cause which it is meant to further, and the pathos of it is deepened by knowing that some at least of those who become unhinged and violent owe their hysterical condition to the shock which came to them in the sudden realization of existing facts about some forms of the moral vice which casts so shameful a stain upon a Christian community, and chiefly on its manhood."

Pontius Pilate might have talked in that way after he had washed his hands and retired for luncheon!

After he had heard of the dreary, pitiful walk to Golgotha he might have said of the great soul dying to help the unhappy: "It is deeply pathetic to see the splendid energy and self-devotion distorted. What has happened is inevitably harmful to the very cause which it is meant to further."

When later other men of Pontius Pilate's race saw the Christian martyrs in Rome eaten by lions, slain by gladiators, soaked with oil and used as living human torches, they probably said it was pathetic and pitiful to see such energy and devotion wasted.

Shouldn't you think that the solemn, well-fed, highly paid British archbishop would see in the noble effort of the English women something above his criticism and beyond his understanding?

Many Americans do not know the conditions under which English women live.

That Archbishop lives where the woman cannot get a divorce unless she can prove that her husband has been both unfaithful to her AND BRUTALLY CRUEL.

Tens of thousands of women live in England knowing that their husbands are leading dissolute, shameful lives, aware that they (the wives) are exposed every day to the horrible danger of a disease infection that is unspeakable.

And these women cannot be freed.

They dare not leave their husbands—FOR IF THEY DO THE ENGLISH LAW GIVES HIM THE CHILDREN.

The woman with young children in England, married to a man who lives a vile life that endangers her health, must give up her children, or wait patiently to endure all that may happen.

Do you wonder that women rebel against such laws, made by men for men?

How many men in this world would endure such conditions?

How many would tolerate a law which would allow the wife to lead publicly a life of shame and patiently submit, knowing that rebellion would mean the loss of his children?

How many British HUSEANDS would stand that?

And if THEY do not stand it, why should the WOMEN stand it?

And why should this solemn bishop criticize a woman like Mrs. Pankhurst, worth ten million of him, because of a courageous devotion which he cannot understand?

Recently, in the famous "Piccadilly Flat" case in London, it was shown that the dreadful institution was maintained for the destruction of young girls. Reference was made in court proceedings to "their extreme, obvious youth."

The men involved in that scandal—the men whose money paid for that institution—were referred to throughout the trial as "gentlemen," and their names were not revealed.

And the woman who kept the institution, the creature who took the men's money, was sentenced to three months in jail in "the second division," an easy grade of imprisonment, whereas at about the same time Mrs. Pankhurst, giving her life to a fight against the horrible degradation of women, including English wives, was sentenced to three years in prison.

Women WILL vote in England. They will bring pressure to bear upon government, on the King, on the power that puts men in office, judges on the bench and archbishops in their palaces.

And when women shall have been voters for a while you will not have judges sending the keeper of a horrible dive to prison for three months and sentencing such a woman as Mrs. Pankhurst for three years.

And you will not have archbishops like the solemn Canterbury gentleman criticising what he cannot understand.

We advise the gentle Archbishop to read and think over Christabel Pankhurst's book, "Plain Facts About a Great Evil" and to learn by heart this extract from that book:

"If the bishops and the whole pack of men who delight in advising, lecturing and preaching to women would exhort the members of their own sex to some sacrifice of their baser impulses, it would be better for the race, better for women, and better even for men."

As the old "Rocket," Stephenson's locomotive, looks today to the man who has seen the modern locomotive; as the Santa Maria of Columbus would look to the voyager on the Vaterland, so will look the airship "America," which is to seek to cross the ocean, to the men and women a hundred years from now. There can be no possible doubt that the scientific brains of the future will do in a hundred years for aviation as much as the inventors of the last 100 years have done for transportation by land and sea.

Too Many Dutiful Wives Spoil Their Husbands

This Woman Philosopher Asserts the Only Way to Make a Man Treat You Properly Is to Treat Him as Badly as You Can

By DOROTHY DIX

"YOU can't," said the Woman Philosopher, as she stirred her tea, "do your duty by your husband or your servants without ruining them.

"Now I never have a good servant more than six months at a time, because I am a humanitarian, and strong for the brotherhood, and also the sisterhood, of mankind, and by the time I have practiced my beautiful and altruistic theories that long upon a maid she is so spoiled that she is no account, and I have to let her go and get another.

"For instance, having a head and a back that are given to aching, I am always looking out for the dull and heavy eyes and sagging shoulders in my maids that indicate that they also have heads and backs.

"So I will say, 'Mary, you don't look well today, so take things easy. Don't sweep under the beds. Don't scrub out the bathtub, just wipe it up. Give a lick and a promise dusting.'

"But does Mary appreciate this? Is she so filled with gratitude for a considerate mistress that on the day she does feel well she polishes up things until they shine like the handle of the great front door in the Tuileries? Not at all. Mary considers that my letting her off easily on the cleaning up when she is sick gives her carte blanche to slight the work all the time, and she's ruined for a house maid until some martinet of a housekeeper takes her in hand and knocks my spoiling out of her.

Give Them an Inch and They Will Take a Yard

"And it's the same way about holidays. I realize how monotonous domestic service is, and so I give my maid about three times as many days off as other people do theirs.

"But the way they repay this kindness is by staying out later and later on their days off until finally they don't come back until midnight, and after I've had to cook a dinner or two I find myself in the employment agency hunting another servant to spoil. It's the handiest and most difficult mistresses and the ones who treat their servants most as if they were machines who get the best servants, which is discouraging to those of us who would like to be little sisters to the poor.

"And precisely the same thing applies to husbands. The only way to make a man treat you properly is to treat him as badly as you can. Men never appreciate what women do for them, they only appreciate what they do for women, and the more that a man does for a woman the more value she has in his eyes. Which is a masculine peculiarity that we women never grasp, because we are built on opposite plans and specifications.

"For example, take the matter of a woman working to help her husband. If the husband is poor that seems to be her duty, but does it pay? Oh, dear, no. Far from it. There's not one self-made man in a hundred that doesn't get a kick when he gets rich, and wake up the tool-worn wife, who has grown old before her time helping him make his fortune, for some young and pretty creature who wouldn't turn her hand over to do anything for him except help him spend his money.

"I've never seen a woman who worked hard to help her husband get even so much as a 'thank you' for it, and so my advice to any woman who feels an impulse to put her shoulder to the wheel is to restrain herself, because she'll wear herself out for nothing.

"Now when I married my husband was a poor young fellow, and I was awfully in love with him and wanted to help him, and be the ideal wife, and so I started right in to be a model of industry and thrift. I did all my housework, and instead of being down on his knees in gratitude to me my husband seemed to think that I had a curious passion for diverting myself with the cook stove and the washtub. When we got able to have servants it was years before I could convince him that I didn't do the work of two hired women for fun.

Thought I Could Dress Up on Nothing a Year

"And because I had done without good clothes and pretty things I had firmly established in his mind the idea that I could dress on nothing a year. I'd spoiled him, you see, and to this day he has complexion fits over the price of a decent hat or gown.

"In those days, too, when we were poor and I felt that he had all the burden that he could stand I made no demands on him that I could help. He worked hard and I petted him and cosseted him, and put him to bed at night so that he might feel fresh for the next day's struggle. I never asked him to take me to the theatre, or out to a restaurant, or to go to parties with me, and because money was scarce I never intimated that I would like to have little treats—to go on trips, or to have him bring me flowers and candy, such as other men bring their wives, or even to give me presents on anniversaries.

"You might think that now, in the fat years, he would try to make up for those lean ones, but he doesn't. It never enters his head to show me the attention that other women have exacted of their husbands, and get. Nor does he ever make me a present. He was spoiled by my unselfishness.

"I have an amiable and quiet disposition. I never make scenes or lose my temper, or answer back, and that has spoiled my husband also, because he feels that he can safely indulge his own temper and say what he likes to me, as he would not dare to do to a woman who would fight back.

If I Had My Life to Live Over I'd Get the Best

"If I had my life to live over again I would take the best of everything for myself. I would force my husband to consider me, and when things went wrong instead of trying to smooth them over, I would lay on the floor and kick and shriek. I'd be the spoiled one instead of the spoiler, and my husband would have ten times the affection and respect he has for me, and treat me a hundred times better, for as I said in the beginning, you can't treat your husband right without ruining him.

"If I was starting out in matrimony again, with my own experience as a warning, my ideal would not be to be the best wife in the community, but to make my husband the best husband."

The Siege of Derry

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

IN all the annals of the human race it would be impossible to find a holier or more heroic date that April 20. Why? Because on that date in the year of 1689 began the siege of Londonderry, or "Derry," as the descendants of its immortal defenders often call it.

Who that has read had any forgotten Macaulay's chapter on the memorable siege! It is impossible to forget it, once having read or heard the story. The storied maids of Londonderry at Thermopylae, by Crockett and Travis at the Alamo, by the Blue and the Gray at Spottsylvania's "Bloody Angle," do not surpass in thrilling interest, in heroism, in devotion and endurance, the stand that was made by the "Men of Derry" during the hundred and five days that intervened between April 20, when James began the siege, to August 1, when he retired beaten and decimated, from the walls he was not able to scale.

James, confident of success, approached within a hundred yards of the southern gate and asked if they were ready to surrender. "No surrender!" was the answer that came back to him.

The [illegible]s on, and for one hundred and five days James tried in vain to get into Derry. Every assault was met by the determination that would not be denied. The besieged, relieving one another as best they could, stood day and night by their guns. The women stood with them. Even the children served in such ways as they were able; and the siege wore on.

By and by the siege became a blockade. All supplies from the outside world were shut out. Hunger took hold of the besieged.

Pestilence set in. The dead lay in the streets and houses unburied.

The siege gave way itself slowly along; the cannon continued thundering against the walls; the pangs of hunger gnawed away; the pestilence kept on with its horrors. No one dared say surrender, even if he had thought it; and the emaciated heroes were still standing by their guns when, on the 30th of July, the besieged saw the sails of three vessels coming up the Foyle.

Those vessels were their salvation. Running the blockade, they safely reached the city with food and ammunition, and James and his battered legions retired. The siege was over, and the men of Derry had won.
